BOYERTOWN, Pa. (AP) — George Barkasi, 20, president of Nittany Flying Club at Pennsylvania State University, and Emil Konkus, also 20, disc jockey at radio station WILM, Bloomburg, were killed Tuesday in the crash of a light plane.

Konkus, of Minersville, was known professionally as Ken Ross. He had been at the Bloomburg station since February and was scheduled to go on the air Tuesday night.

Barkasi, of Boyertown, was piloting a plane owned by the flying club. He died several hours after the crash in Poltsown Hospital.

CORE Leader Opposes Violence

CHICAGO (AP) — Sam Riley, who has offered his resignation as head of the Chicago chapter of the Congress Of Racial Equality, said Tuesday he is opposed to violence and favors greater discipline.

Riley, 40, a Negro, talked with newsmen about his resignation and demonstrations at the Board of Education that touched off a clash with police.

"I'm very pleased that there was no more violence," he said. Asked if he opposed violence, he replied: "Sure. I feel there should be greater discipline."

He added that he would do his best to avoid violent incidents if the "opposing force is dedicated to nonviolence." He explained that he meant the Board of Education and the police.

Fairbanks Denies Call Girl's Claim

LONDON (AP)—Marilyn (Mandy) Rice-Davies testified at the trial of Dr. Stephen Ward Tuesday that she slept with Lord Astor and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. Through a New York public relations firm Fairbanks issued a vigorous denial.

The puckish, 18-year-old call girl said she never got any money out of Fairbanks or Lord Astor. And she defended Ward, a 50-year-old society osteopath and artist charged with living on the immoral earnings of a stable of prostitutes.

"I hope he is acquitted," she said from the witness stand. Fairbanks said he was making a statement through a New York spokesman because British law prevents him from doing so in London until the case is completed.

Immigration Changes Sought

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy told Congress Tuesday that country-by-country immigration quotas are "without basis in either logic or reason" and should be abolished.

Kennedy proposed legislation that would do away with the 39-year-old national quotas on a gradual basis during the next five years.

A major effect of the program would be to increase annual immigration from the 1962 level of 92,000 to a planned level of 164,500. Most of the increase would be accounted for by putting to use some 60,000 quota numbers which are "wasted" each year by countries having larger quotas than they can use.

Another effect would be to increase sharply immigration from certain countries — notably Italy, Greece and Poland.

Space Program Head Named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. George E. Mueller, 45, who has worked on development of both military and civilian space rockets, was named Tuesday to head the nation's manned space program.

He has been vice president for research and development at Space Technology Laboratories at Los Angeles.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Mueller will take over Sept. 1 as deputy associate administrator for manned space flight.

He will assume the duties handled by D. Brainerd Holmes, who resigned recently as director of the office of manned space flight and deputy associate administrator for manned space flight centers.

Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—An early advance by the stock market faded amid some disconcerting news and stocks suffered their 10th straight daily decline Tuesday. Trading was moderate.

Volume was 3.5 million shares compared with 3.69 million Monday. The Dow Jones industrial average dropped .90 to 887.81.

Civil Rights Decision Sluffed Off To Committee

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ducking a for-or-against stand, the nation's feuding governors suddenly tossed the prickly civil rights issue to a committee Tuesday for study.

Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson followed up with an appeal to members of the National Conference of Governors to help work out a "responsible American answer—not a Democratic or Republican answer—to what he called corrosive racial wrongs."

Whether the governors will come up with any answer at all is questionable. All they did as the climax of days of squabbling and playing politics was to shove through a motion directing the executive committee of the conference to study civil rights as a matter of high priority in the year ahead.

Nevertheless, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, with designs on the Republican presidential nomination next year, told the conference:

"I consider this as a victory for those of us who are dedicated to the establishment of equality of all Americans."

Rockefeller originally had sought to get the conference to set up a special committee to work with the Kennedy administration in trying to achieve "equal rights and opportunities, regardless of race, creed or color" in housing, education, transportation, employment places of public accommodation.

If his Republican colleagues were noncommittal about Rockefeller's chances for the nomination, President Kennedy's friends among the Democratic governors acted as though the New Yorker already had it.

New Jersey's Democratic Gov.

Richard Hughes chided Rockefeller at a conference session about the latter's announcement that the Republicans had become "the party of civil rights."

Rocky Replies
Rockefeller grabbed a microphone to say he wanted to reply to "the personal attacks made on me."

All he was trying to do, the governor said, was to get the conference on record on civil rights.

Gov. John N. Dempsey, D-Conn., offered the motion to turn the civil rights issue over to the executive committee.

The tally was 38-3, and all the three were from the ranks of Southerners who had tried and failed with filibustering tactics to head off any action. The three were Govs. George C. Wallace of Alabama, Ross R. Barnett of Mississippi, and Donald S. Roosevelt of South Carolina.

Johnson came here from Washington with some strong words on civil rights for the governors.

"The trust of public leaders," Johnson said, "will not be kept by exploiting the issue for partisan ends or discouraging its solution for personal advantage."

"American politics must not be less responsible than the electorate it serves. There can be no Democratic answer or Republican answer, no White House answer or statehouse answer, no 1964 or 1968 answer—but only a responsible American answer achieved by all of us, at all levels, working together all of the time for and with the people."

Republican governors have been battling to put the 55th annual conference of state executives on record for action to promote civil rights. Democrats have been heading them off.

Leaders Sign Pact To End Racial Strife In Cambridge

WASHINGTON (AP)—A dramatic written pledge between Negroes and whites heralded at least temporarily peace Tuesday in the city that has transformed Cambridge, Md., into one of the nation's racial battlegrounds.

The agreement was announced by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy after nearly 10 hours of talks with Negro leaders and Maryland and Cambridge officials.

At the urging of Kennedy and his civil rights chief, Asst. Atty. Gen. Burke Marshall, the Negroes agreed to end demonstrations in the belief that "further progress can be best obtained in an atmosphere of calm and serenity."

The commander of National Guard troops who has been enforcing militia law in the little Chesapeake Bay community said the troops will remain there until the town has had time to absorb the meaning of the agreement.

The attorney general termed the pact merely a first step toward bringing the two sides together in harmony.

It was understood that the role of Kennedy and Marshall was to urge the Negroes to recognize that further demonstrations could lead only to bloodshed and that some gains have been made toward equal rights and more are possible only in an atmosphere of peace and good faith.

The agreement pointed to these steps forward in areas which have been in dispute.

A Negro has been hired as an interviewer with the State Department of Employment Security in its Cambridge office. Jobs for Negroes have been a major bone of contention between the races.

The Cambridge mayor and commissioners have adopted a charter amendment calling for desegregation of public eating places and other accommodations.

School integration will be speeded as the first four grades of the Dorchester County school system are desegregated this fall.

Moral Obligation
The agreement said that "while there are no legal sanctions attached to this agreement, yet it is considered as imposing a moral obligation...to abide by and fully support the spirit and intention of this agreement."

Among the signers were Mrs. Gloria Richardson, a leader of the Cambridge Negroes; Cambridge Mayor Calvin W. Mowbray and other city officials, Maryland Atty. Gen. Thomas B. Finan; and a representative of Gov. J. Millard Tawes.

The Cambridge trouble started with demonstrations in January 1962. These were followed by numerous demonstrations and arrests that reached a climax when three whites were shot, police were stoned, and fire bombs were thrown last June 13.

Tawes sent in the National Guard the next day and the troops remained until July 8. On the night of July 11, six whites were wounded and guerrilla warfare broke out. Tawes sent the Guard back the next day.

Unless Halted By Action Of Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's railroads Tuesday emphatically endorsed President Kennedy's plan for averting a nationwide railroad strike. Congress began consideration of the legislation, cautiously optimistic of passage.

But a railroad spokesman said new job-eliminating work rules would still be imposed at midnight Monday — the signal for the threatened walkout — if the administration's bill has not been approved by then.

In a message to Congress Monday, Kennedy asked that the four-year-old quarrel, involving thousands of jobs rail management says are unnecessary, be referred to the Interstate Commerce Commission for binding settlement during a two-year period.

Congressional leaders would not predict they could act on this before the Monday midnight deadline.

Appeals For Delay

House Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass., indirectly appealed to the railroads for a delay in placing the work rules in effect. He told a news conference, before the railroad position was disclosed, that "I assume the status quo will be maintained."

A spokesman for the five on-train unions involved said a statement on the unions' reaction to Kennedy's plan would be issued Wednesday.

But in Cleveland, Roy D. Davidson, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said he could not think of "a worse place than the ICC to refer the dispute to."

"The agency is management-oriented and has no grasp of labor-management relationships and principles," he said.

Hails Plan Action

J. E. Wolfe, chief negotiator for the carriers, let it be known the railroads still plan to introduce their new work rules at midnight Monday.

"I do not see any circumstances under which we will hold the notices down other than enactment of legislation, which will automatically pull them down," he said.

Under Kennedy's plan the railroads would be required to submit the rules changes to the ICC for approval. The commission would be authorized to issue court-enforceable interim orders deciding each point. The orders would be in effect during the two years the ICC is authorized to act, unless the unions and management reached earlier agreement through bargaining.

Thus, the elimination of jobs could begin even during the two-year period of the ICC jurisdiction if that agency supports some or all of the new rules.

The Senate Commerce Committee opened hearings on the program Tuesday.

House Okays Funds Shift; Acts On State Constitution

HARRISBURG (AP) — An administration plan to shift $100 million in Highway and Bridge Authority borrowing for non-interstate highways was approved on a vote of 38-6 by the Senate Tuesday night and sent to Gov. Scranton.

Senate minority leader Charles R. Weiner charged that if the $100 million was earmarked for non-interstate road construction, double service costs would rise considerably.

In addition, he claimed, all of the roads built with the money would be "located in Republican counties."

Another administration proposal, calling for a November referendum on a convention to rewrite the state constitution, was sent to the floor of the House with a prediction by the Judiciary Committee chairman it will be defeated by the voters.

Predicts Defeat

Rep. Charles R. Auken, R-Blair, committee chairman, predicted defeat, pointing out that the voters had rejected five previous referenda on the question.

The developments came during long sessions of both Houses of the legislature, which were marked by frequent recesses.

The borrowing bill was the only major action taken up by the Senate before it quit for the night.

Senate Republicans reportedly had a vehement intramural fight in their caucus over a bill to increase truck weight limits from 60,000 to 73,280 pounds and a measure to permit the state to provide free school bus transportation for private school pupils. Decisions on both measures were deferred again.

Other Action

Educational Television — The Senate completed legislative action by a vote of 47-3 to provide $370,000 for a statewide educational television network. The measure goes to the governor for his signature.

Hospital Aid — The House Appropriations Committee sent to the floor for a vote a measure allocating $14.9 million for 185 private hospitals providing free care for needy patients.

Highways Commission — A bill to set up a state highway commission for long-range road planning was amended by the House Appropriations Committee to restore its original form, which relegated the unit to advisory capacity. As amended earlier by the House Highways Committee, the commission would have had supervisory powers.

Negotiators Reported Ready To Complete N-Test Treaty

MOSCOW (AP) — Bright and smiling, American, British and Soviet negotiators left the conference table Tuesday, apparently having drawn up a nuclear test ban treaty satisfactory to all sides. But they scheduled another meeting for Wednesday—possibly to talk about an East-West non-aggression pact.

U.S. chief negotiator W. Averell Harriman, Britain's Lord Hailsham and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko were in a jovial mood as when Premier Khrushchev opened the talks nine days ago.

An hour before the delegates emerged from Spasskaya Palace, their experts completed the draft of the treaty which would ban nuclear tests in the air, outer space and under water.

Underground tests were exempted from the prohibition.

It was learned that the proposed treaty was modeled after one Britain and the United States submitted to the 17-nation disarmament conference in Geneva last Aug. 27. The Soviet Union rejected it at the time.

Possible Snag

Whatever hindrances there were to an early initialing of the treaty, were reported to be out of the way. It appeared certain, however, that some of the sweeping security demands made by Khrushchev will be the subject of future talks—perhaps ultimately at the summit level.

If the British and Americans have their way, the new talks will begin in Geneva, in the committee on disarmament which has been struggling in vain for two years to get something done.

Khrushchev has demanded especially a nonaggression pact between the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations of the West and the seven Communist nations of the Warsaw Pact.

To avoid having that rise as a barrier, President Kennedy is reported to have agreed to exchange unilateral pledges of nonaggression with the Soviet Union. The President has promised to consult America's allies first.

Revived Proposal

Khrushchev also revived a five-year-old proposal for stationing inspection teams at airports, rail terminals, at ports and on highways on both sides of the Iron Curtain to give the tip on any surprise attack.

Of massive importance to the financially pressed Soviet Union, Khrushchev also asked for a standstill agreement on military spending.

After initialing here, the treaty would have to be approved by each government. In the case of the United States, this would require Senate approval.

Already a considerable amount of opposition is arising in the Senate, but reports from Washington indicated approval of this limited test ban was likely unless Khrushchev managed to hook a nonaggression rider on it. That hindrance appeared somehow to have been removed.

House Committee Clears Budget Bill

HARRISBURG (AP)—A $1,698,500 appropriation for state subsidies to 185 private hospitals was approved unchanged Tuesday by the House Appropriations Committee.

It is the last major item in Gov. Scranton's $1.12 billion budget for 1964.

The measure was sent to the full House for further action.

The same committee also restored the administration-backed bill to set up a highway planning commission to draw up long-range roadbuilding programs, knocking out a House Highways Committee amendment that would have set up the commission as a super-administrative agency for the department.

The appropriations committee change reduced the proposed commission to an advisory status, as suggested by the administration and approved by the Senate.

However, the appropriations committee once again met without taking action on the administration bill to establish a community college system in the state.

Meanwhile, the House Education Committee approved legislation to raise the value of 80 competitive college scholarships awarded by the state to $50 per year. They now are worth $30. The 1961 legislature had set up 100 additional state scholarships worth $20 per year.

Other bills approved in House committees would:

Provide that the state make up for losses lost on land taken over for dams, reservoirs or state parks in the future.

Continue for two more years the $30 million minimum as the share of local governments from state gasoline tax receipts.

Permit the state to buy hospital insurance to pay for medical assistance to the indigent.

Give a convicted person credit for time spent in jail prior to sentencing.

Provide a supplemental $30 monthly pension to former state employees on retirement for 10 or more years prior to last June 1 and $25 to those on retirement for five to 10 years as of that date.

After giving the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a closed-door briefing on U.S.-Soviet-British discussions in Moscow, he told newsmen that they "will continue for a day or two."

He said he had brought the committee up to date on the discussions.

Asked when he plans to go to Moscow, Rusk replied that "there are no plans for going anywhere now."

But he said "the drafting group (in Moscow) has been making progress" and went on to say he thought there was a possibility "we can get an agreement on it."

Other sources said agreement is virtually at hand on a pact to ban nuclear tests in the air, in space and under water.

A formal announcement is expected soon on the windup of the Moscow sessions and the U.S. negotiator, W. Averell Harriman, may be returning to Washington as early as Thursday to report to President Kennedy, it was stated.

While officials said a formal decision has not yet been made on Rusk's trip, it is understood that the secretary of state currently intends to go to Moscow next week as a follow-up to the Harriman visit.

Racial Roundup

Negro and white leaders from Cambridge, Md., one of the nation's racial battlegrounds, signed an agreement Tuesday in Washington that brought at least temporary peace.

In New York City, police arrested more than 140 pickets at several construction sites, where demonstrators blocked trucks driving onto the jobs.

Leaders of the pickets, who want more jobs for Negroes and Puerto Ricans in construction trades, met with Mayor Robert F. Wagner. He promised to investigate their complaints.

In Baton Rouge, La., Police Chief Wingate White and five policemen were mobbed by about 50 Negroes attempting to desegregate the city park swimming pool. A police captain was cut on the head and arm. Five Negroes, including two women, were arrested.

Meanwhile, the Army began moving its last 250 troops out of Oxford, Miss., where soldiers had been on guard at the University of Mississippi since Negro James Meredith entered last fall amid bloody rioting.

Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., undersecretary of commerce, told the Senate Commerce Committee in Washington that racial discrimination has become an explosive national issue and "is crying for an answer."

Roosevelt, who is undersecretary of commerce, testified in support of legislation to outlaw discrimination in stores, restaurants, hotels and other places of public accommodation.

He presented Commerce Department data showing what he termed the "adverse effects of racial discrimination in public accommodations on interstate commerce" and predicted that "by and large our businessmen, North and South, will welcome" the legislation.

Roosevelt rejected the argument that the bill involves an unwarranted invasion of private property rights but said "property rights are secondary to human rights."

Craftsmen Show Opens At ESSC

EAST STROUDSBURG — Visitors to the Pocono Mountain area are urged to take in the 19th Annual Fair of the Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsmen. It will be held at the East Stroudsburg State College, in East Stroudsburg, starting today and running through Saturday.

An innovation this year will be a series of lecture-demonstrations which will be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings at 9 o'clock.

While these are designed mainly for the craftsmen themselves, the public is invited to attend. These seminars will be conducted by eminent craftsmen and will cover several unusual crafts.

As usual, there will be demonstrations of all sorts going on as part of the fair itself.

Through its annual fair, the Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsmen seeks to promote an appreciation for crafts, to bring to the public an awareness of the craftsman, and to do this through a series of seminars and demonstrations of the state's outstanding craftsmen.

House OKays Hunting License Hike

HARRISBURG — The increase in resident hunting license fees from $3.15 to $3.20 was approved by the House Monday.

The proposal was sent to the Senate on a 129-66 vote after 15 minutes debate.

The increase is expected to raise an additional $1.5 million in revenue.

An increase in the non-resident fee from $1 to $1.25 was seen in the Senate last week.

Cut Defeated
Rep. W. Max Bousert, R-Clinton, sponsored two of the unsuccessful amendments. One would have cut the increase to $1 for the resident licensees.

Another would have made the same cut, but would have raised the non-resident deer license from $1.15 to $3.20, and the bow and arrow permit to $3.20, from the present $2.15.

Rep. Jules Elio, D-Allentown, said "You're going to have a hard time getting hunters to buy licenses," with reference to his prediction that the rise in fees would cause a decrease in license sales.

FACING THE FUTURE WITH VISION AND COURAGE

State Senator Fred Rooney, a native son, has a deep awareness of the needs, the problems and the hopes of the people of the 15th Congressional District. From the industrial centers of Bethlehem and Easton to the depressed mining areas of Carbon and the farming and recreational lands of Monroe and Pike counties, these concerns of the people are much the same. These are jobs, individual and family security, opportunity for youth, full dignity for the aging, and a profound hope for a future blessed by prosperity and peace. Fred Rooney, as an experienced legislator, knows that these longings of the people are not met in a day or a year, but that the people, working with their Congressman, and drawing upon their own vision and courage, will move, as they always have, towards these goals. This is the course Fred Rooney will follow with vigor and determination in the Halls of Congress. For it is to the well-being, the security and the future of all the people of the 15th Congressional District which he now pledges all his energies and his own future.

Health Survey In Roseto In 3rd Week; 300 Examined

ROSETO — The University of Oklahoma Medical Center Health Survey of Rosetoans is now in its third week of operation, with a total of over 300 examined thus far.

Dr. James W. Hampton, assistant professor of medicine, and director of the clinic, said "the response to the survey has been good. Rosetoans and former Rosetoans have been most cooperative with former Rosetoans living at great distances returning to be examined by the medical team. This latter group represents an important phase of the survey."

Hampton stated that "medical reports on individuals who demand prompt attention are being telephoned to family physicians." The two physicians assisting Hampton are Dr. M. E. Groover and Dr. C. G. Gunn, both associate professors of medicine at the university.

30 Per Day
A maximum of 30 examinations per day for each of the five days of the clinic is hoped for, according to Hampton.

Dr. John E. Bynum, director of the sociological studies of the Roseto culture, mentioned that the sociological studies are "purely exploratory," and that over 400 Rosetoans have been interviewed up to the present time. The sociological studies will terminate August 1, according to Dr. Bynum.

Both the medical survey and the sociological study teams have not fully satisfied their theories concerning why there is such a low incidence of death from heart attacks in Roseto, according to Miss Florence Giacinto, publicity chairman for the studies. For this reason, both teams feel that "any information they may publicize would be premature, and not comprehensively correct." It was pointed out by Miss Giacinto.

Scout Retreat Plans Settled

PORTLAND—Plans for a Scout's Retreat were made at a meeting of the Catholic Committee on Scouting of the Delaware Valley Area Council held with a family picnic recently at Culpepper's Grove.

Chairman Peter Mueller announced the retreat would be September 15. Edward Cullen was appointed head of registration; Michael Fisher, food; Henry Cullen, altar boys; physical arrangements, Algeo Barolacci and Frank DeFranco, and publicity, Peter Mueller.

Cities Area Redevelopment Program Treatment

Bartlett Raps Federal Neglect Of District

PALMERTON — "The first step toward correcting Federal neglect of the 15th District could be taken by electing me to Congress," Robert G. Bartlett, Republican candidate for Congress said yesterday in Palmerton.

"Look at this district's treatment under the Area Redevelopment Program," Bartlett told the crowd. "It's bad enough that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania gets back less than fifty cents on the dollar paid by our people to the Federal Government in taxes, but our district hasn't gotten one iota of ARA help."

Bartlett outlined two areas which could benefit the local employment situation. He said Area Redevelopment is a "good program, poorly administered." He pointed out that the 15th District is "ripe for a good hard-hitting program of local, state and Federal cooperation. If we could just interest the New Frontier in attacking unemployment and helping people rather than setting up political slush funds for Texas and Massachusetts, we could get started on a long-range program of getting full employment for the 15th District."

He said election of his opponent would "put this district out of mind because the New Frontier would take its support and vote for granted." He noted that his opponent has pledged "automatic approval" of all Administration policies. "They would just file him away under 'finished business' and count his vote before it was cast," Bartlett said.

He said unemployment could be countered by these measures: 1) By stimulating investment in building plants and factories. 2) Retraining of workers who possess skill but need to apply it to new processes. 3) Expand vocational and technical schools so that a steady supply of well-trained young jobholders can be developed. 4) Overhauling of the Area Redevelopment program to make it a "workable, feasible, effective program to benefit the people whose tax dollars support it."

Speaks In Bangor
Bartlett told a rally crowd at Bangor Monday that the economic future of every family in the 15th District may well depend upon the success of Congress in curbing inflation.

He said he is better qualified to fight inflation than his opponent whose "vote is already committed to support wasteful programs."

Bartlett said he is against expansion of Federal programs that do not attack the basic problems facing the people of the Nation. "We must launch a massive attack upon inflation which is undermining family income."

"Savings" In Danger
He warned that savings of 15th District families are in danger unless "you have someone in Washington who will join with other thinking Congressmen to curb defense waste, trim foreign aid to a reasonable level, and fight for programs that give Pennsylvania something more than four bits back after the bureaucrats in Washington get through with our Federal tax dollars." He said "The Federal government should not be building for itself, it belongs to the people and it should be working for the people."

Health Survey In Roseto In 3rd Week; 300 Examined

ROSETO — The University of Oklahoma Medical Center Health survey of Rosetoans is now in its third week of operation, with a total of over 300 examined thus far.

Dr. James W. Hampton, assistant professor of medicine, and director of the clinic, said "the response to the survey has been good. Rosetoans and former Rosetoans have been most cooperative with former Rosetoans living at great distance returning to be examined by the medical team. This latter group represents an important phase of the survey."

JOHN BAIRD JR., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Baird Sr., of 41 N. Green St., East Stroudsburg, graduated May 31 from Aviation Familiarization School in Memphis. Baird is an airman apprentice. He graduated from East Stroudsburg Joint High School.

Hampton stated that "medical reports on individuals who demand prompt attention are being telephoned to family physicians." The two physicians assisting Hampton are Dr. M. E. Groover and Dr. C. G. Gunn, both associate professors of medicine at the university.

30 Per Day
A maximum of 30 examinations per day for each of the five days of the clinic is hoped for, according to Hampton.

Dr. John Bruhn, director of the sociological studies of the Roseto culture, mentioned that the sociological studies are "purely exploratory," and that over 400 Rosetoans have been interviewed up to the present time. The sociological studies will terminate August 1, according to Dr. Bruhn.

Both the medical survey and the sociological study teams have not fully satisfied their theories concerning why there is such a low incidence of death from heart attacks in Roseto, according to Miss Florence Giakinto, publicity chairman for the studies. For this reason, both teams feel that "any information they may publicize would be premature, and not comprehensively correct," it was pointed out by Miss Giakinto.

Cities Area Redevelopment Program Treatment

Bartlett Raps Federal Neglect Of District

PALMERTON — "The first step toward correcting Federal neglect of the 15th District could be taken by electing me to Congress," Robert G. Bartlett, Republican candidate for Congress said yesterday in Palmerton.

"Look at this district's treatment under the Area Redevelopment Program," Bartlett told the crowd. "It's bad enough that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania gets back less than fifty cents on the dollar paid by our people to the Federal Government in taxes, but our district hasn't gotten one iota of ARA help."

Bartlett outlined two areas which could benefit the local employment situation. He said Area Redevelopment is a "good program, poorly administered." He pointed out that the 15th District is "ripe for a good hard-hitting program of local, state and Federal cooperation. If we could just interest the New Frontier in attacking unemployment and helping people rather than setting up political slush funds for Texas and Massachusetts, we could get started on a long-range program of getting full employment for the 15th District."

He said election of his opponent would "put this district out of mind because the New Frontier would take its support and vote for granted." He noted that his opponent has pledged "automatic approval" of all Administration policies. "They would just file him away under 'finished business' and count his vote before it was cast," Bartlett said.

He said unemployment could be countered by these measures: 1) By stimulating investment in building plants and factories. 2) Retraining of workers who possess skill but need to apply it to new processes. 3) Expand vocational and technical schools so that a steady supply of well-trained young jobholders can be developed and 4) Overhauling of the Area Redevelopment program to make it a "workable, feasible, effective program to benefit the people whose tax dollars support it."

Speaks In Bangor

Bartlett told a rally crowd at Bangor Monday that the economic future of every family in the 15th District may well depend upon the success of Congress in curbing inflation.

He said he is better qualified to fight inflation than his opponent whose "vote is already committed to support wasteful programs."

Bartlett said he is against expansion of Federal programs that do not attack the basic problems facing the people of the Nation.

"We must launch a massive attack upon inflation which is undermining family income."

"Savings" In Danger

He warned that savings of 15th District families are in danger unless "you have someone in Washington who will join with other thinking Congressmen to curb defense waste, trim foreign aid to a reasonable level, and fight programs that give Pennsylvania something more than four bits back after the bureaucrats in Washington get through with our

Highway Hypnosis

Alarmed by the spiraling number of deaths in Pennsylvania during the past few weeks, the Keystone Automobile Club has issued a warning to all motorists to beware of "highway hypnosis."

Since the beginning of the summer season, nine persons have died in highway accidents in Monroe County. The causes of these fatalities may vary, but often a contributing factor is the presence of a semi-hypnosis induced by the monotony of modern motoring.

Monotony, repetition and freedom from distraction are the relaxing factors which often lull motorists into a trance or self-induced hypnosis. Other factors are sense-dulling summer heat and humidity, and superhighways and turnpikes that wind through the countryside for hundreds of miles without billboards, stop lights and intersections.

The car's purring mechanical perfection, the seemingly endless stretches of bright road surfaces, the minimum of grades and curves, the rhythmic pattern of lights at night, also add to the cumulative hypnotic effect. Then comes the danger; the driver has ceased to think and be alert and the car literally is driving itself toward an accident.

What can we do to avoid highway hypnosis?

Several simple but very effective things. On long trips motorists should stop at regular intervals and get from behind the wheel for a cup of coffee or a "stretch." If driving alone, the motorist should lower the car windows in order to get or create a breeze, munch candy or chew gum, and turn on the car radio. One must be careful in using the radio, however; commentators and speakers will help to keep the senses alert, but such things as soothing music must be avoided.

Passengers in a car can be a big help in overcoming the trance-like state of mind by keeping up an interesting flow of conversation. In fact, this is one instance in which back-seat driving is highly excusable... if it isn't too disturbing.

Summing up, then, the motorist can avoid dangerous mental numbness by having a mild curiosity about everything and by employing slight distractions to keep the mind from taking a psychic siesta.

Opinions Of Other Editors

Signs Of The Times?

There is a new song released called "Rats in My Room" that has been receiving a big play on eastern Pennsylvania and New York radio stations.

It is probably the worst piece of garbage to be churned out by tin-pan alley hacks in many years.

The tune is nothing—it's a wonder if it can be put down with conventional notes.

The lyrics can be called nothing but doggerel. The first verse goes:

"Rats in my room, I'm bothered by those rats in my room. Those dirty little rats in my room."

The second verse, with the same progression of monotone, goes: "Fish in my dish, I'm bothered by a fish in my dish. Those slimy little fish in my dish."

Third sparkling verse: "Goats in my boat, I'm bothered by that goat in my boat. Those stinky little goats in my boat."

Fourth piece of trash: "A bear in my hair, I'm bothered by a bear in my hair. That crummy little bear in my hair."

Last verse: "Snakes in my cake, I'm bothered by some snakes in my cake. Those lousy little snakes in my cake."

The thing is horrible. I'll probably sell a million copies to finky little 13-year-olds who swipe money from their mother's purses and use the change for nickel cigars to chew.

The Pennsylvania Story

Legislative 'Lobbying'

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg—One of the more striking aspects of the current 1963 legislative session—now wheezing down a fitful home stretch—has been an almost complete absence of attempted legislative influence on the part of administrative departments, boards and commissions on Capitol Hill.

For the most part during the current session, department heads have been kept pretty well holed up in their own departmental sanctuaries rather than being found in legislative halls and corridors trying to influence passage of legislation in which their particular department has been interested.

This in itself is in decided contrast to the practice condoned during some of the past sessions of Pennsylvania's Legislature.

During the 1955 and 1957 sessions, for example, "legislative engineers" from the various and sundry departments on Capitol Hill could be found in legislative circles on nearly every legislative day, bawling away spiritedly in behalf of (or) departmental legislation.

It was somewhat of a novelty and innovation—a novelty and innovation in that such activities had never before been conducted on such a grandiose scale. Lawmakers were literally "snowed under."

Previously, any such activity on the part of Administration department aides and chiefs had been rather casual, or perhaps happily inquiring, more than anything else.

It represented indeed the constitutional chasm between the executive and legislative branches.

When Governor Leader moved into office in 1955—the then first Democratic chief executive in 16 years—a change on this score became noticeable immediately.

In the 1955-56 legislative session, the House of Representatives was Democratic administration-controlled (just as it is now Republican Administration-controlled) and the Senate then was in (anti-administration) GOP second and last of the Leader Ad-hands. The 1957 session—the second and last of the Leader Administration—was completely dominated by Republicans.

These two sessions under Mr. Leader, unquestionably due to the Legislature's political complexity, saw the dawn of hard-hitting Administration "lobbying" on the part of administration department heads.

Lawmakers were buttonholed in legislative halls and corridors. Bitter public denunciations of legislators who opposed pet projects of administration department heads showered over Capitol Hill and became routine.

In effect—the executive branch seemed bitterly intent on clobbering the legislative branch, not as a general overall administration move but tied up in individual department head slugs.

The contrast: In January of 1959 another Democratic Governor moved into office and a new legislative session got under way, again with a politically split legislative branch.

Mr. Lawrence laid down the law early—and apparently effectively. The front office would serve as the sole fountainhead. The order held.

What about the current session and the new Republican Senator Administration?

It's been pretty much along the same vein, with administration department heads and sub-bureaucrats keeping pretty well out of the legislative picture unless specifically asked.

For one thing Mr. Seranton is a strong believer in adhering to the distinction between the legislative and executive branches of government—preferably letting each tend to its own knitting.

So far the knitting needles have clicked fairly well.

Off The Record

—By BOB CLARK

The worm is turning. Robert G. Bartlett, Republican candidate for representative in the 15th Congressional District, sees victory in the wings at the special election on July 30.

The Bethlehem resident who is battling State Sen. Fred B. Rooney for the right to fill the late Francis E. Walter's seat in Congress, has removed the veil of pessimism and placed an optimistic halo on his head.

Bartlett previously had commented that his campaign was five per cent short of his goal a week ago. Today, however, the 31-year-old West Point Military Academy graduate is predicting a victory on July 30.

The turning point? In Bartlett's words, "the recent debate between me and my opponent in Bethlehem indicated the campaign was swinging in my favor."

Bartlett pin-pointed that GOP workers are going all out to put him in Washington, D.C. He also remarked that unsolicited Democratic assistance is making itself known, especially in Northampton County.

The swing from the underdog's role to confident-victory tag is following the size-up observers noticed early in Bartlett's drive for the most coveted political spot in the 15th District.

"With each passing day, Bartlett is accumulating more poise," one political newsmen noted. "Naturally the confidence will arrive not too long before election day," the journalist observed.

In his final analysis the typewriter puncher noted, "He is either being coached by a real professional or he is the most sincere office-seeker to come along in a long while."

What are the evaluations you hear about Bartlett's chances, come July 30? Most men and women in the know—and they have been wrong more than once—feel it will be a close race. One individual, a Democrat, predicted that Bartlett would win the city of Bethlehem—a prediction that even a die-hard Steel City GOPer won't mumble.

Easton and the rest of Northampton? It was brought out by a newsmen that the split in Northampton's Democratic Party—no one will verify it, naturally—will have a big bearing on the outcome.

Possibly Bartlett heard all these reports plus the favorable comments of his ward workers. Thus you have the loss of the underdog jacket and the wearing of the triumphant coat.

Advisors Conflict

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott
Washington—A sharp dispute is raging inside the Kennedy Administration over strategy in securing State approval of the nuclear test ban agreement negotiated in Moscow.

This backstage controversy, which may delay sending the pact to the Senate for ratification, has been under way for weeks—starting long before Undersecretary Averell Harriman flew to Russia—with the President getting directly conflicting counsel from top advisers.

Some White House assistants are urging that a showdown with Congress on this explosive issue

be put off until next year, to give the administration and private groups time to build up public support for the treaty.

These advisers contend that such a nationwide campaign is necessary before the two-thirds vote required for Senate ratification can be lined up. They point out that the agreement is certain to generate a stormy battle, in the Senate as well as in the country at large, and that the utmost "public pressure" will be essential to procure Senate ratification.

Also argued by these advisers is that there is no need for haste in submitting the Moscow accord to the Senate since, in effect, it is an "interim" agreement that provides for further negotiations to include both other nations and the still far from settled issue of underground testing.

In view of these "open end" provisions, these advisers hold the President can justify delaying submission of the test ban understanding until he can determine the course the later negotiations are likely to take.

Meanwhile, it is asserted the nationwide campaign to build up public support for the Moscow pact can be put into full effect.

Alternative Course—But another equally influential group of State and Defense Department officials is taking a directly opposite view.

They are insisting the President must "strike while the iron is hot," and lose no time in exerting every effort to secure speedy Senate ratification. It is asserted this course is the only way the administration stands any chance of inducing the Senate to accept eventual inclusion of Red China in a test ban pact.

It is the theory of these White House advisers that prompt Senate approval of the partial test ban accord will make it easier to later extend it to include other nations, among them Communist China, Cuba and India.

Significantly, this group is pointing out that this strategy is squarely in line with the President's closely-guarded correspondence with Premier Khrushchev pledging that "all nations, including Communist China, should be brought under a nuclear test ban treaty."

It is the opinion of these advisers that despite the very determined efforts that can be expected by opponents of a test ban, in the end from 70 to 75 senators, more than the two-thirds required for ratification, will vote for the Moscow agreement. This estimate is based on a survey by David Martin, adviser of Senator Thomas Dodd, D-Conn., an administration supporter on this issue.

However, this backstage poll did not take into consideration a highly disruptive explosion that is likely to rock the Senate when the Armed Services Preparedness Subcommittee reports on its closed-door hearings on U.S. and Soviet nuclear testing and capabilities.

The subcommittee's stormy findings, which the White House is strenuously trying to keep from being published, will show that the Moscow accord is heavily weighed in favor of the Russians.

Members of the committee will charge (1) that the Soviet has a commanding lead over the U.S. in the development and testing of giant super-megaton weapons and anti-missile missile warheads; and (2) that the test ban treaty will block this country from catching up.

They will also vigorously contend it is "utterly unrealistic" to believe that a test-ban agreement signed by the U.S., Britain and Russia will stop the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

While the President is still weighing these conflicting counsels, White House insiders hint he is leaning toward the strategy of the second group; that is, to send the treaty to the Senate this year.

The President himself pointedly intimated this in his press conference last week, when in reply to a question on the test ban talks he said, "If the present negotiations should be successful, it will be important to reach the widest possible agreement on nuclear testing throughout the world."

Inside Story—Senator Richard Russell, D-Ga., chairman of the powerful Senate Armed Services Committee, had a great deal to do with Defense Secretary McNamara's sudden about-face on servicemen participating in radical demonstrations.

McNamara's reversal of an Air Force order permitting airmen to take part in these affairs followed directly on the heels of a letter from Russell demanding a categorical statement of the Defense Department's position on this explosive question.

After being prodded by Senator Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., to act, Russell wrote McNamara: "My attention has been called to an Air Force policy that permits members of that Department to participate in off-base demonstrations. Presumably this policy is in accord with that of the Department of Defense and will be applied to other military departments."

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.
An excellent example of the cooperation between the Food and Drug Administration and manufacturers was demonstrated recently.

An elastic, putty-like material was produced by a reliable manufacturer and marketed as a toy. The fun it brought to children seemed to be accompanied by irritating skin rashes. When it was definitely established by the Federal health agency that the synthetic product was responsible for the allergic skin condition in children the manufacturer immediately removed the product from the market.

This incident is characteristic of our government's strict supervision and control of our national health.

Comprehensive Network
A bulletin has been received by doctors all over America which illustrates the comprehensive network of health protection given us constantly by our Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The bulletin reads in part: "From time to time, the Food and Drug Administration, individually or in co-operation with professional or industry groups will issue statements of important drug developments from the standpoint of new and serious adverse reactions, warnings and contra-indications."

Will Be Marked
The envelopes and letters in such cases will generally be marked to show that they transmit such information; for example, with a statement such as DRUG WARNING.

"We will be glad to have you report to us any adverse reactions associated with the use of any drug. These reports will be given the most careful consideration."

It is a source of great comfort for doctors, their patients and their families that our Federal health agencies never relax their strict vigilance.

THE DEGREE OF BURNS
The classification of first, second and third degree burns is of major importance to the doctors and surgeons who treat these emergencies.

The number represent the extent and severity of the damage to the burned tissue. In cases of severe burns, doctors have often been handicapped by the impossibility of making this definite medical distinction.

Accurate Determination
In the Department of Plastic Surgery at Cornell University Medical School, Dr. Herbert Conway and his colleagues have devised a brilliant technique for more accurate determination of the degree of burns. By the injection of a special dye, the healthy tissue in a burned area can be clearly identified.

This additional valuable guide, used successfully in many cases, is of great importance if plastic surgery should become necessary.

HOT WEATHER REMINDER
Desserts that contain custard and salads made with mayonnaise dressing deteriorate rapidly when not refrigerated and can cause serious gastric upsets. These particular foods should be kept in the refrigerator until just before serving.

Most restaurants are aware of this, but if you have any doubt about refrigeration, it is best not to order these foods.

These columns are designed to relieve your fears about health through a better understanding of your mind and body. All the hopeful new advances in medicine reported here are known to doctors everywhere.

Your individual medical problems should be handled by your own doctor. He knows you best.

Dear Abby

Try Appreciating It -- And Them!

DEAR ABBY: Why do people think that because you have a large family, your yard is a public playground? Right now twelve kids are playing ball in my back yard, and only seven of them are mine. The children aren't allowed to play in other yards because they ruin the grass. I really don't mind, but I wouldn't hurt some of the other parents to share the noise with me. At night they ask me to turn on my yard lights so they can play after supper. When, oh, when will I have peace and quiet again?

JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: Too soon. And you can take my word for it. Count your blessings. Your children are occupied in healthy, wholesome play, and you don't have to worry about where they are—or with whom. Anybody can raise grass. It takes special qualities to raise children.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and my mother and I have been fusing over something very silly. We were all at the ball game and I was with a very nice boy. He took my hand. My mother then leaned over and told me to quit holding hands with him. Abby, couldn't she have waited until I got home? She had to make a big scene in front of everybody. I don't see anything wrong with a boy and girl holding hands at a ball game, do you?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Your mother could have told you quietly to quit holding hands, but I think she was right to tell you. A display (even a minor

one) of affection is out of place in public.

DEAR ABBY: Someone suggested to "Ma" (who was upset at seeing "Pa's" choppers grinning at her from the dresser top while Pa was outside mowing the lawn) that she "steal" Pa's choppers and leave in their place $3.20 from the "Good Fairy." Well, a set of dentures contains only 28 teeth. So at the rate of 10 cents per tooth, Pa should be left only $2.80. Sincerely,

In Defense Of Women

By George Dixon

Washington—I feel it is high time to come galloping to the succor of my female constituents. If ever in the long dark history of man's inhumanity to woman they needed a champion, it is now. They are beset by so many contradictions on so many sides, they must be saved.

The must be beset by conflicting statements that they are forging ahead in every field of endeavor, but that not one in his land of opportunity has attained enough skill to be an astronaut, although a Russian girl made it.

If this isn't sufficient contradiction to confuse their pretty heads, they need turn only to surveys conducted by Rutgers and Johns Hopkins Universities. Rutgers found that women are gaining on men in alcoholism; Johns Hopkins that moderate drinkers live longer than teetotalers.

Although it is considered rather difficult for either a moderate drinker or a teetotaler to be an alcoholic, apparently more women than men are trying.

But are they getting credit for effort?

I submit that women are being very modest about their attainments. They aren't proud and overbearing just because they're becoming alcoholics at a faster rate than men. They do it to prove over the announcement by the Rutgers' center of alcohol studies that women made up only one-twentieth of alcoholics in the 19th century, but have advanced to a fifth in the 20th.

It is encouraging that the ladies are being so modest about this. It indicates proper perspective. It shows they are giving men a great deal of the credit for driving them to drink.

That our dear ones are not taking to moderate drinking as enthusiastically as to alcoholism, I feel can be explained too. When women do a thing, they are inclined to be more thorough than men.

Also, no matter how ungallantly Lt. Col. John A. Powers, the "Notch of Mercury Control" for space flights, underrates the potentialities of our women for astronautics, he'll never succeed in convincing any red-blooded American female of that—or even paleoblooded me. O look for our fine strapping girls to follow the exhortations of Jamie Gibbs, the outspoken young aviator from Oklahoma City. Miss Gibbs urges other ladies to stop and throw scorn at "Shorty" Powers.

I associate myself unreservedly with Admiral Jerard Wright, now our ambassador to Nationalist China. Before leaving for Taiwan he was feted by the American Newspaper Women's Club. In recompense he told them that "newspaper girls make wonderful wives."

My only feeling is that Ambassador Wright did not make it strong enough. Many newspaper-woman who have taken on a matrimonial sideline are more than wonderful.

Some I would describe as downright fantastic.

I realize that all this sounds sycophantic, as if I were making a brazen play for more feminine readers, but I mean it from the heart. Women, even if they're not in the newspaper business, often make good wives.

I don't mind confessing I am personally upset by statistics released by the Women's Bureau of the department of labor. It reveals that one out of every three workers in the United States today is a woman, whose average age is 41 years, and whose average income is $3,293.

Hum! One out of three makes $3,293 a year in just one marriage, how could I have blown two chances?

To further parade my elatedly I am taking umbrage at Senator Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota who stated that the McClellan Committee's "FX" inquiry has accepted answers from Assistant Secretary of the Navy James H. Wadkin that "we wouldn't have accepted from a girl girl or Jimmy Hoffa."

As the poet might say, "Why drag sex into FX?" and, speaking for me and my dear ones, "sex and FX doth further vex."

If that's Senator Mundt's idea of a compliment, we don't want him complimenting us.

Veteran's Guide

Q—My GI Insurance premium was due last week. Must I make formal application for reinstatement?

A—No. You have 31 days of grace from the date your premium was due to make payment and avoid a policy lapse.

Q—If I should die, what must my wife do in order to qualify for a VA pension?

A—She should write, telephone or visit the nearest VA office (there is at least one in every state) to see if she is eligible for pension under the statutory income limitation. The VA will explain this to her and send her the necessary application forms.

Today, July 24, the eight-cent Amelia Earhart commemorative will have first day sale.

August 1 will see the release of the phosphor-tagged eight-cent air mail stamp at Dayton Ohio. Field tests will begin August 1 at Dayton Ohio, in which envelopes bearing air mail stamps printed with special phosphor ink will be separated from untreated mail at over all rate of 20,000 per hour. If the tests are successful eventually all stamps will be phosphor-tagged.

A small black box added to the Mark II face-cancelling machine will "recognize" and separate the specially treated stamps in this field test.

It was conceived and is being developed by Post office Department research scientist working in conjunction with the National Cash Register Company, Dayton, Ohio, and climaxes experiments that have been going on for more than three years.

August 15 at Chicago Illinois,

The five-cent Emancipation Proclamation commemorative will have first day sale.

August 17 at Washington, D.C., the five-cent Alliance for Progress stamp will be released.

Club News

The Board of Directors of the Monroe Stamp Club met last Wednesday and planned the program for the coming year. Many new ideas were brought forth and added to the yearly program.

The president, Marie Possinger, made the following appointments of committee chairmen for the coming season: Christmas Party—Rudy Butsch; Monroe County School Exhibit—John Possinger; and the closing party co-chairmen Luther Schneider and Ray Patton.

Several new suggestions for club activities will have to be voted upon by the members at the first meeting September 18.

Stamp swap sessions will be resumed this Wednesday at 8 p.m.

Highway Hypnosis

Alarmed by the spiraling number of deaths in Pennsylvania during the past few weeks, the Keystone Automobile Club has issued a warning to all motorists to beware of "highway hypnosis."

Since the beginning of the summer season, nine persons have died in highway accidents in Monroe County. The causes of these fatalities may vary, but often a contributing factor is the presence of a semi-hypnosis induced by the monotony of modern motoring.

Monotony, repetition and freedom from distraction are the relaxing factors which often lull motorists into a trance or self-induced hypnosis. Other factors are sense-dulling Summer heat and humidity, and superhighways and turnpikes that wind through the countryside for hundreds of miles without billboards, stop lights and intersections.

The car's purring mechanical perfection, the seemingly endless stretches of bright road surfaces, the minimum of grades and curves, the rhythmic pattern of lights at night, also add to the cumulative hypnotic effect. Then comes the danger; the driver has ceased to think and be alert and the car literally is driving itself toward an accident.

What can we do to avoid highway hypnosis?

Several simple but very effective things. On long trips motorists should stop at regular intervals and get from behind the wheel for a cup of coffee or a "stretch." If driving alone, the motorist should lower the car windows in order to get or create a breeze, munch candy or chew gum, and turn on the car radio. One must be careful in using the radio, however; commentators and speakers will help to keep the senses alert, but such things as soothing music must be avoided.

Passengers in a car can be a big help in overcoming the trance-like state of mind by keeping up an interesting flow of conversation. In fact, this is one instance in which back-seat driving is highly excusable... if it isn't too disturbing.

Summing up, then, the motorist can avoid dangerous mental numbness by having a mild curiosity about everything and by employing slight distractions to keep the mind from taking a psychic siesta.

Opinions Of Other Editors

Signs Of The Times?

There is a new song released called "Rats in My Room" that has been receiving a big play on eastern Pennsylvania and New York radio stations.

It is probably the worst piece of garbage to be churned out by tin-pan alley hacks in many years.

The tune is nothing—it's a wonder if it can be put down with conventional notes.

The lyrics can be called nothing but doggerel. The first verse goes:

"Rats in my room, I'm bothered by those rats in my room. Those dirty little rats in my room."

The second verse, with the same progression of monotone, goes: "Fish in my dish, I'm bothered by a fish in my dish. Those slimy little fish in my dish."

Third sparkling verse: "Goats in my boat, I'm bothered by that goat in my boat. Those stinky little goats in my boat."

Fourth piece of trash: "A bear in my hair, I'm bothered by a bear in my hair. That crummy little bear in my hair."

Last verse: "Snakes in my cake, I'm bothered by some snakes in my cake. Those lousy little snakes in my cake."

The thing is horrible. It'll probably sell a million copies to finky little 13-year-olds who swipe money from their mother's purses and use the change for nickel cigars to chew.

'Your Trouble Is A Split Personality'

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg—One of the more striking aspects of the current 1963 legislative session—now wheezing down a fifth home stretch—has been an almost complete absence of attempted legislative influence on the part of administrative department heads, boards and commissions on Capitol Hill.

For the most part during the current session, department heads have been kept pretty well holed up in their own departmental sanctuaries rather than being found in legislative halls and corridors trying to influence passage of legislation in which their particular department has been interested.

This in itself is in decided contrast to the practice condoned during some of the past sessions of Pennsylvania's Legislature.

During the 1955 and 1957 sessions, for example, "legislative engineers" from the various and sundry departments on Capitol Hill could be found in legislative circles on nearly every legislative day, bawling away spiritedly in behalf of (po) departmental legislation.

It was somewhat of a novelty and innovation in that such activities had never before been conducted on such a grandiose scale. Lawmakers were literally "snowed under."

Previously, any such activity on the part of Administration department aides and chiefs had been helter-skelter, genteel, somewhat casual, or perhaps hopelessly inquiring, more than anything else.

It represented indeed the constitutional chasm between the executive and legislative branches.

When Governor Leader moved into office in 1955—the then first Democratic chief executive in 16 years—a change on this score became noticeable immediately.

In the 1955-56 legislative session, the House of Representatives was Democratic administration-controlled (just as it is now Republican Administration-controlled) and the Senate then was in (anti-administration) GOP second and last of the Leader Ad-hands. The 1957 session—the second and last of the Leader Administration—was completely dominated by Republicans.

These two sessions under Mr. Leader, unquestionably due to the Legislature's political complexity, saw the dawn of hard-hitting Administration "lobbying" on the part of administrative department heads.

Lawmakers were buttonholed in legislative halls and corridors. Bitter public denunciations of legislators who endorsed pet projects of administration department heads showered over Capitol Hill and became routine.

In effect—the executive branch seemed bitterly intent on clobbering the legislative branch, not as a general overall administration move but tied up in individual department head slug-fests!

The contrast: In January of 1959 another Democratic Governor moved into office and a new legislative session got under way, again with a politically split legislative branch.

Mr. Lawrence laid down the law early—and apparently effectively. The front office would serve as the sole fountainhead. The order held.

What about the current session and the new Republican Administration?

It's been pretty much along the same vein, with administration department heads and sub-bureaucrats keeping pretty well out of the legislative picture unless specifically asked.

For one thing Mr. Scranton is a strong believer in adhering to the distinction between the legislative and executive branches of government—preferably letting each tend to its own knitting.

So far the knitting needles have clicked fairly well.

Advisors Conflict

Washington—A sharp dispute is raging inside the Kennedy Administration over strategy in securing State approval of the nuclear test ban agreement negotiated in Moscow.

This backstage controversy, which may delay sending the pact to the Senate for ratification has been under way for weeks—starting long before Undersecretary Averell Harriman flew to Russia—with the President getting directly conflicting counsel from top advisers.

Some White House assistants are urging that a showdown with Congress on this explosive issue

be put off until next year, to give the administration and private groups time to build up public support for the treaty.

These advisers contend that such a nationwide campaign is necessary before the two-thirds vote required for Senate ratification can be lined up. They point out that the agreement is certain to generate a stormy battle, in the Senate as well as in the country at large, and that the utmost "public pressure" will be essential to procure Senate ratification.

Also argued by these advisers is that there is no need for haste in submitting the Moscow accord to the Senate since, in effect, it is an "interim" agreement that provides for further negotiations to include both other nations and the still far from settled issue of underground testing.

In view of these "open end" provisions, these advisers hold the President can justify delaying submission of the test ban understanding until he can determine the course the later negotiations are likely to take.

Meanwhile, it is asserted the nationwide campaign to build up public support for the Moscow pact can be put into full effect.

Alternative Course—But another equally influential group of State and Defense Department officials is taking a directly opposite view.

They are insisting the President must "strike while the iron is hot," and lose no time in exerting every effort to secure speedy Senate ratification. It is asserted this course is the only way the administration stands any chance of inducing the Senate to accept eventual inclusion of Red China in a test ban pact.

It is the theory of these White House advisers that prompt Senate approval of the partial test ban accord will make it easier to later extend it to include other nations, among them Communist China, Cuba and India.

Significantly, this group is pointing out that this strategy is squarely in line with the President's closely-guarded correspondence with Premier Khrushchev pledging that "all nations, including Communist China," should be brought under a nuclear test ban treaty.

It is the opinion of these advisers that despite the very determined efforts that can be expected by opponents of a test ban, in the end from 70 to 75 senators, more than the two-thirds required for ratification, will vote for the Moscow agreement. This estimate is based on a survey by David Martin, adviser of Senator Thomas Dodd, D-Conn., an administration supporter on this issue.

However, this backstage poll did not take into consideration a highly disruptive explosion that is likely to rock the Senate when the Armed Services Preparedness Subcommittee reports on its closed-door hearings on U.S. and Soviet nuclear testing and capabilities.

The subcommittee's stormy findings, which the White House is strenuously trying to keep from being published, will show that the Moscow accord is heavily weighed in favor of the Russians.

Members of the committee will charge (1) that the Soviet has a commanding lead over the U.S. in the development and testing of giant super-megaton weapons and anti-missile missile warheads; and (2) that the test ban treaty will block this country from catching up.

They will also vigorously contend it is "utterly unrealistic" to believe that a test-ban agreement signed by the U.S., Britain and Russia will stop the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

While the President is still weighing these conflicting counsels, White House insiders hint he is leaning toward the strategy of the second group; that is, to send the treaty to the Senate this year.

The President himself pointedly intimated this at his press conference last week, when in reply to a question on the test ban talks he said, "If the present negotiations should be successful, it will be important to reach the widest possible agreement on nuclear testing throughout the world."

Inside Story—Senator Richard Russell, D-Ga., chairman of the powerful Senate Armed Services Committee, had a great deal to do with Defense Secretary McNamara's sudden about-face on servicemen participating in racial demonstrations.

McNamara's reversal of an Air Force order permitting airmen to take part in these affairs followed directly on the heels of a letter from Russell demanding a categorical statement of the Defense Department's position on this explosive question.

After being prodded by Senator Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., to act, Russell wrote McNamara: "My attention has been called to an Air Force policy that permits members of that Department to participate in off-base demonstrations. Presumably this policy is in accord with that of the Department of Defense and will be applied to other military departments."

Dear Abby

Try Appreciating It -- And Them!

DEAR ABBY: Why do people think that because you have a large family, your yard is a public playground? Right now twelve kids are playing ball in my back yard, and only seven of them are mine. The children aren't allowed to play in other yards because they ruin the grass. I really don't mind, but it wouldn't hurt some the other parents to share the noise with me. At night they ask me to turn on my yard lights so they can play after supper. When, oh, when will I have peace and quiet again?

JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: Too soon. And you can take my word for it. Count your blessings. Your children are occupied in healthy, wholesome play, and you don't have to worry about where they are—or with whom. Anybody can raise grass. It takes special qualities to raise children.

DEAR ABBY: I am 14 and my mother and I have been fussing over something very silly. We were all at the ball game and I was with a very nice boy. He took my hand. My mother then leaned over and told me to quit holding hands with him. Abby, couldn't she have waited until I got home? She had to make a big scene in front of everybody. I don't see anything wrong with a boy and girl holding hands at a ball game, do you?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Your mother could have told you quietly to quit holding hands, but I think she was right to tell you. A display (even a minor

one) of affection is out of place in public.

DEAR ABBY: Someone suggested to "Ma" (who was upset at seeing "Pa's" choppers grinning at her from the dresser top while Pa was outside mowing the lawn) that she "steal" Pa's choppers and leave in their place $3.20 from the "Good Fairy". Well, a set of dentures contains only 28 teeth. So at the rate of 10 cents per tooth, Pa should be left only $2.80.

Sincerely,

DENTAL ASSISTANT

$296,435 Monroe County Home Expansion Okayed

STROUDSBURG — State Senator Fred B. Rooney, Democratic candidate for Congress from the 15th District, last night announced approval in Washington of a $296,435 public works grant for expansion of the Monroe County Home at Kellersville.

Rooney said total cost of the 51-bed expansion at the County Home will amount to $663,375.

"Announcement of approval of this grant by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is welcome news. The problems of the aging — in Monroe County as elsewhere in our district and the Nation — weigh seriously upon the conscience of every citizen," Rooney said.

"There are nearly 47,000 men and women over 60 years of age in Monroe, Pike, Northampton and Carbon Counties combined," Rooney said. "Although most of them can be cared for within the family circle, for others this proves impossible. It is to them — as well as to our own mothers and fathers — that we have a responsibility for decent housing, adequate health care and a life of dignity after their productive years are over."

The grant to the Monroe County Institution District is made possible by the accelerated public works program passed by the 87th Congress.

At the same time, Senator Rooney said that he is hopeful the U.S. Public Health Service and the Community Facilities Administration will give final approval to a $37,000 grant to construct a sewage treatment plant in the borough of Jim Thorpe. The treatment plant is the final phase of a program initiated by Jim Thorpe which includes a sewage collection system.

The Community Facilities Administration granted $53,000 for the collection system on April 25.

Senator Rooney supplied additional information to the Public Health Service in favor of the sewage treatment plant last week. He hailed progress on the project as "another example of the manner in which local people, through local governments, can work in partnership with the Federal Government and its agencies for the common good of all the community's citizens."

Sees Nation Stronger

"The heartfelt prayers of every American should be with the President of this country during these perilous times," Fred Rooney said in addressing a rally sponsored by the Women's Division of the Rooney for Congress Campaign Committee at Hotel Eaton.

Rooney said: "Because our Nation is stronger today than ever before — and because Nikita Khrushchev knows we intend to keep it that way — we stand today on the threshold of the first major breakthrough in our quest for world peace."

"There is a stronger possibility, now, than ever before, that the United States and Russia may reach agreement on a nuclear test ban with a system of guarantees against testing."

"There is a possibility now, as never before, that the Castro regime may founder on its own greed and there are increasing signs that Russia is growing tired of fooling the bill for Castro's blunders."

"Our Defense establishment is more firm and more powerful at this moment than it has ever been. We have increased the number of combat-ready army divisions by 45 percent since President Kennedy took office."

The Memorial to stand for years to come must be carved from fine and faultless stone, we offer this to you.

Serviceman, Contractor Differ Sales Tax Works Many Ways

By Jeff Cox
Daily Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — With sales tax up to five per cent, it behooves the citizens to know exactly what type of work is tax-exempt.

The area of most immediate concern is the builder's and servicemen's provisions as stated by the Bureau of Sales and Use Tax of the State Department of Revenue.

According to the law, a serviceman can charge full sales tax on his total bill, but a contractor can charge sales tax only on his materials.

The reasoning behind this is that the contractor is considered by the bureau to be the ultimate consumer of all material and supplies necessary to construction of realty contracts.

Since the contractor is the ultimate consumer of all materials in that sense, the tax is limited to the materials and the labor is not taxed.

The law says, "A contractor is not permitted to separately charge a sales tax upon the price of the construction contract."

Only On Materials
Thus, if you have a back porch built on your house, and the contractor charges you $400 and tacks on $25 for sales tax, hand the bill back to him. The tax should be computed only on the cost of materials.

The law states, "A taxable service means any services rendered by servicemen upon personal property owned by others which are defined as sale by retail. The term sale by retail includes:

"Altering, cleaning or repairing tangible personal property whether the property is transferred by servicemen to customers or not."

This means that if a repairman adjusts your carburetor, he must charge five per cent on the service charge.

Remember that a delivery charge is not taxable. If you have something delivered to your home, and the bill is itemized to include the delivery charge, make sure that the tax is computed only on the amount without including that delivery charge.

If the bill is not itemized, it would do well to ask the deliveryman for an itemized bill to check and see if the tax is computed on the item or service only, and not the delivery charge.

Here is an important point: the law says, "Sale at retail specifically excludes any services rendered in connection with construction, reconstruction, remodeling, repair, or maintenance of real estate."

Need Not Pay Tax
This means that repairs on your real estate, except for cost of materials, are exempt. You need not pay the tax.

To continue with the taxable services, they also include:

"Applying or installing tangible personal property as a repair or replacement part of other personal property whether any personal property is transferred by the serviceman in conjunction with the services or not."

"Also altering, cleaning, inspecting, lubricating, waxing, repairing motor vehicles whether any property is transferred or not. Services upon wearing apparel such as cleaning, sewing, or pressing must be taxed except in the garment making industry or diaper services. Printing services also must be taxed."

This tax must be charged upon almost all services in retail but not upon real estate contracting or repairing.

At Cherry Lane Playhouse

'Say Darling' Show To See

ANALOGY—"Say, Darling," this week's comedy cum music at the Cherry Lane Playhouse, is the story of the writings of the musical, "Pajama Game," from the book by Richard Bissell.

A hectic comment on the entertainment world, the show has a swift grease paint-Sardis-late-rehearsal rush atmosphere about it.

Starring Jana Peneve and Charles Hull as the couple from "Indiana, Iowa, or somewhere," we see a very well done contrast between the country bred folk, and the urbane sophisticates.

Hull portrays the writer of the book that became "Pajama Game," and we are constantly reminded of the fact that the interpretation falls under the justification of "musical comedy."

The book on which the musical is based undergoes change, as does the couple's relationship. Hull must stay later and later for rehearsals; he becomes more interested in the work, and in Irene Lovell, the predatory female actress played by Maggie Worth.

Needless to say, he very seldom sees his wife and family, and he is constantly smotheringly referred to by Hackett, the producer, well played by Richard Marr, as being a "family man."

Contrasts

This example of Hull's being a family man is just one facet of the contrasts in the play. George Pentecost portrays the young Princeton intellectual director. His portrayal of the role as a really mad one, literally. Most of the time he acts like a frustrated child intellectual, trying to run the new show.

Arthur Rodney appears as a "yes man," or at the very least, a director who somehow doesn't have his heart in the play. Rodney, along with Marr, Miss Worth, and George Pentecost make up the other half of the contrast—the sophisticated side. They are excellent in the slick, smooth, almost cliché-like world show people live in.

Jack Levin appears as the man who has been hired to write the musical score for the new production. At first, the score is rough, raucous, and quite funny. Then it smooths out. It's too bad no more of the musical score could have been presented, for it shines. Levin, though, really plays the part of the egotistical artist.

Including the music of the Broadway production by Adolf Green and Betty Comden, and presenting some excellent subtle humor, "Say, Darling" is the show to see.

Miss Worth summed it up by smiling to a comment by Hull, "people who write musicals shouldn't be married."

At Cherry Lane Playhouse

'Say Darling' Show To See

ANALOMIN—'Say, Darling,' this week's comedy cum music at the Cherry Lane Playhouse, is the story of the writings of the musical, 'Pajama Game,' from the book by Richard Bissell.

A hectic comment on the entertainment world, the show has a swift grease paint-Sardi's-late-rehearsal rush atmosphere about it.

Starring Jana Pearce and Charles Hull as the couple from 'Indiana, Iowa, or somewhere,' we see a very well done contrast between the country bred folk, and the urbane sophisticates.

Hull portrays the writer of the book that became 'Pajama Game,' and we are constantly reminded of the fact that the interpretation falls under the justification of 'musical comedy.'

The book on which the musical in the play is based undergoes change, as does the couple's relationship. Hull must stay later and later for rehearsals; he becomes more interested in the work, and in Irene Lovell, the predatory feline actress played by Maggie Worth.

Needless to say, he very seldom sees his wife and family, and

Exchange Student Can't Wait To Get To N'fld

NEWFOUNDLAND — "I can't wait to go to America," wrote Camille Foelisch, Swiss exchange student who will arrive here from her home in Lausanne on August 24.

Camille will be met in New York by Mr. and Mrs. Tom Gange, and their daughter, Joyce, of Lake Harbor, Greentown, and Dr. and Mrs. Frank Uridel, Newfoundland. Her first host home will be with the Uridels.

Plans for her arrival, and the reading of an exchange of letters, highlighted a meeting of the Rotary Exchange Student Committee at Southern Wayne School this week. Camille noted that she had received "Athena," the SWJS yearbook sent to her by Jan Smith and Jeanne Borbridge, hosts on the student level.

Camille lives in a resort area in Switzerland, and enjoys lake sports, she said. She lives "in a small village on the edge of town," and the family has a large garden and includes a dog.

Letters received by committee and Rotary Club members reveal a friendly family — all looking forward to Camille's stay in Newfoundland. However, the club had one shock — the first letter was written entirely in French. Subsequent letters have been written in English — an English that reveals the quaint interpretations by a French-speaking family.

Lothi Swiss Flag

Clayton Northup, a member of the committee, reported that he had secured from the embassy in Washington, and his request brought the offer of a "loan" for 30 days of the Swiss flag, which could be flown in Newfoundland in her honor. The matter was taken to the Rotary Club meeting for further discussion.

Mrs. Foelisch, in a letter received this week by a committee member, said "I hope Camille will be pleasant, and give a good idea of Swiss girls."

From the amount of work and planning put into the Rotary exchange program by the club and committee members, they, too, are hoping to convey to Switzerland, via Camille, an impression of a friendly, pleasant and welcoming community.

Strike Spurs Steel Action

CLEVELAND (AP)—The threat of a railroad strike started a minor flurry of protective action by steel users last week, but didn't trigger additional buying of the metal, Steel Magazine said yesterday.

The metalworking weekly said that some users asked for faster deliveries while others requested that shipments be rescheduled from rail to truck.

"On the East Coast," it said, "there was genuine concern—especially where shipments were for export, with ships already in port or scheduled for early arrival."

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

I never could agree with mothers who wish their children were little again. Let's face it — most of us with grown children are lucky that despite our sins of omission and commission they have turned out as well as they have.

I'd hate to tempt fate by going through it all again. I might not make the same mistakes but I'd make dandy new ones and this time the kids might not be so resilient. And besides, I've always enjoyed each stage just as it was. I'll qualify that: except the stage from 13 to 15 when I think all boys ought to be turned over to uncles and all girls to aunts the way the Navahos do. Uncles and aunts have the family honor at heart without the emotional fireworks of too close identification.

Certainly we'd hate to give up the present stage of being friends and equals, two of us agreed yesterday contentedly listening to our married daughters chattering away about recipes and home decor with their friends. Being responsible for their own households has made them much more tolerant of our short-comings, and not feeling responsible any longer for their manners and morals has made us much more relaxed.

Which is not to say that I don't wish I had a tape recording from all the phases gone by. And one I'll bet Cynthia and John Watts will wish they had caught was reported by Nancy. She and her husband had stopped to see the Watts while they were in Palm Beach on vacation. Young Sandy who is a very bright little boy was very interested in the whole project, and listened very carefully while they told about their trip to Miami. Then he turned to his mother and said, "If they went to Mr. Aml, where is Your Aml?"

One person who seems to have neatly solved the problem of having her cake and eating it too is Ann Hawkes Hutton. Her daughter, Katie, graduated from college and got engaged this summer which pretty exclusively ends one phase. But Mrs. Hutton, in the process of writing her play about Washington which will have its world premiere at the Cherry Lane Playhouse on Aug. 19 has used not only Katie's name but has also drawn on her experiences in raising a daughter to create the character of the female lead in the play.

Since Mrs. Hutton's husband contends that he's had to compete with Washington during her 25 years of research into the life and times of the General, the play should be an exciting experience not only for the Huttons but for all of us.

Local Pomona Grange Acts On School Law Repeal

Raymondskill Valley — The Monroe-Pike Pomona Grange voted to send a telegram to Gov. Scranton asking him to sign the bill repealing P. L. 561, a mandatory school re-organization law, at their meeting Saturday with Raymondskill Valley Grange as hosts.

The action followed the reading of a letter from the State Master, John Scott, requesting immediate action on an appeal to the governor on behalf of repeal of the law which he felt would do away with local school directors.

The Pomona Grange also voted a donation in support of the Outdoor Good Manners project to be conducted in all the schools of the area. Christine Teachman reported on the project and also on the State Grange Leadership School at State College in June.

Pomona Master, Charles Van Seiver, presided at the meeting. A letter was read from the chairman of the home economics committee, Mrs. Richard Seidof, clarifying state grange home economics projects.

Elected for two years were Percy M. Polly of Mount Prospect Grange as master. Also elected were Emil Laubacher, overseer; Helen Croop, lecturer; Elbert White, steward, all of Raymondskill Valley Grange; Eugene Weiser, assistant steward and Martha Bradshaw, chaplain, Mount Prospect Grange.

Margaret Gavaille, Raymondskill Valley, treasurer; James Alborano, secretary; Robert Crane, gatekeeper; Maybette Crane, Pomona, from Mount Prospect Grange; Susan Maureaux, Ceres; Leona White, Flora, and Sylvia Loux, lady assistant stewards, all of Raymondskill Valley Grange.

Elected to the executive committee were Andrew Teachman, Mount Prospect; Charles Van Seiver, Pomona Grange; Fred Matthews, Greeley Grange; Richard Seidof of Mineola Grange, was elected to the finance committee. Mrs. Seidof was appointed chairman of the home economics committee for two years.

These officers will be installed at a special meeting to be held at Mount Prospect Grange Hall on Saturday, Sept. 7. The next regular meeting of Pomona will be held Sept. 21 at Greeley Grange when the degree of Pomona will be conferred in full form.

Refreshments were served by the host grange.

Camper, Counselor

Delaware Water Gap — Miss Yoyo Goshensky spent four weeks as counselor at Camp Archibald. Her sister, Yona, was there for two weeks as a camper. Her mother, Mrs. Ben Goshensky and another sister, Ora, visited her paternal grandmother, Mrs. H. Black, in Rockaway, N.Y., for several days.

It's not a good idea to add curry powder to eggs that are to be scrambled because the combination usually turns out to have an unappetizing color. If you must have curry flavor with your eggs, add a little of the powder to the filling for stuffed eggs.

The top pastry of your pie not brown enough? Brushing the top round with milk before baking usually does the trick.

WSCS Hears Of Church Home For Girls

Mount Pocono — Details of life at a church-sponsored home away from home for girls was described at the meeting of the Woman's Society of Christian Service at the Mount Pocono Methodist Church by Mrs. Harry Rigger, who also showed colored slides of Esther Hall, Philadelphia.

Age limit for the home is 30, she explained, and the girls must present references and pass a physical test before being accepted at the home. They are charged according to their income.

Mrs. William Wright, president, presented Mrs. Rigger with a corsage which had been made by Mrs. Harry Taylor. Mrs. Wright also thanked those who had helped to make the recent bazaar a success. Mrs. Nellie Sharbaugh had special thanks for members of the Young Women's Circle who made articles for the fancy work booth. A bus trip was planned for October to visit both the Deaconess Home and Esther Hall in Philadelphia. It was reported that Mrs. Laura Hughes, 90, the oldest member of the society, had suffered a stroke about three weeks ago and has entered Persons Convalescing Home, 943 Allegheny St., Jersey Shore.

Mrs. Gertrude McCarthy led the devotions. Mrs. Wright will be in charge of altar flowers during August.

There were 15 members and two guests present including Sherry Grose and Wendy Peterson. Mrs. Donald Wisner has become a member. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Wright, Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. Alvin MacWilliams, Mrs. Carroll Amos and Mrs. Donald James.

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

"Gee whiz, Mom . . . look at this!"
Our store was thronged Monday, and the enthusiastic shout came from a brown-haired, much tanned lad in camping attire who was bent intently over a display of whistles from Yugoslavia in our International Gift Center. "They're only 29c," he explained as he finally wheeled his mother away from our Italian glassware. "See, they're whittled out of wood and painted. Look, Mom—there's a bird . . . and a viola . . . and a hammer. Hey, looka this!—a revolver."

His mother glanced briefly at the brightly painted articles, and turned away to find something of interest to herself. He was desperate. "MOM . . . I said a revolver. C'mon now, Mom. Twenty-nine cents is dirt cheap for anything all the way from Yugoslavia."

"Mom" ignored him. Actually he couldn't have cared less, for he was already intrigued by the table before which she was standing. It was laden with elephants, burros, lidded boxes and sculptured bookends of various size—real works of art, all of them, priced from 79c to 12.50 or so. "Golly!" he exclaimed, grabbing up a grayish-white elephant. "This is really something, isn't it Mom? What is this stuff anyway?"

His mother explained she thought it was onyx from Mexico, hand carved. "We'd oughta buy an elephant," he told her. "An elephant is good luck if its trunk is in the air. Here's the elephant I'd like to have . . . and it's only 10.00. That isn't much for an onyx elephant from Mexico, is it, Mom?"

His mother looked at me with a grin and a head-shake of despair. "He's been like this ever since we came in here. I feel I should apologize. He's usually a rather quiet boy but . . ." She clipped her sentence abruptly as she looked past me to where her son was standing, holding a piece of African sculpture in the air and shouting. "Hey, Mom . . . come here and see this stuff." As she headed toward him, she smiled at me again. "We just don't get in a store like this very often."

I had to laugh as I watched her wrest the statuette from her son's hands. It was a very unusual, rather grotesque carving of either a goddess or human being, obviously of feminine sex with huge head, tiny busts, and feet almost too tiny to hold so much weight. "But MOM," I heard him protest, "it's only 4.98 . . . and that isn't much for something from AFRICA, is it?"

About fifteen minutes later, I passed mother and son once again. He was busily licking away at some chocolate ice cream purchased, no doubt, at our Wyckoff Fountain. The woman remembered me and spoke. "At last I found a way to keep him quiet," she said, nodding toward the cone.

She was carrying a rather large package, and I am still wondering what it contained. An elephant from Mexico??? A wood carving from Kenya??? Whatever it was, both of them seemed happy, and I'm sure they'll always remember their shopping trip to Wyckoff's. Someday they'll be back . . . that's a certainty.

You too would enjoy a visit to Wyckoff's. Why not make one today?

Vitamins Vs. Well-Done Vegetables Moot Point In Many Household Battles

By Linda Pipher
Daily Record Home Economist
Foods and nutrition students are taught to preserve vitamins in vegetables, they should be cooked in a very small amount of water for a short time. They are not just taught these cardinal principles, they are drilled and drilled until they think of Vitamin A as a human being, and are dedicated to its preservation. It's either that or flunk the course; the instructor has only to see a limp, dull green bean to give you that "vitamin murderer look" plus a fat F in her grade book.

So after four years of this it becomes automatic to serve bright colored vegetables, cooked only until they are fork tender. And, of course, I carried on my crusade when I was first married, ignoring Bill's subtle question, "Are those vegetables done?" When his patience was exhausted I firmly explained that Vitamin A was necessary for good skin and healthy eyes. But he didn't want lectures, he wanted cooked vegetables (overdone and mushy in my book).

Finally after threats to go home to Mother to get some good vegetables, I cooked broccoli according to his wishes. It had to be boiled and boiled, and boiled with butter poured over it; not pretty golden melted butter, but browned until it was just before the burning stage. When I put the dish of dead looking broccoli downed in almost scorched butter on the table, I cringed and guiltily thought how horror stricken Miss Anderson would be if she could see what I was serving. Even Bill's contented smile as he ate wouldn't have thawed her frozen look.

It's been one of our marital conflicts all these years. Even last night when I was cooking zucchini, he looked in the pan and said, "Be sure that squash is done." I glared at him, but cooked it five minutes longer. Such is the way of married life (sigh). But it was good, and I think you would like it, too.

Music Of Recorder Marks Service

Stroudsburg — The music of an ancient instrument, the recorder, marked the Sunday night service of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church held in the Fifth Street Mission, Gordon Danielson of Syracuse was the musician. He was accompanied at the piano by his wife, the former Bernina Hostetter.

Bernina is organist at the South Presbyterian Church in Syracuse, N.Y. Her husband is one of the musicians in the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra. They have been visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Hostetter, Rev. Hostetter brought the message on Sunday night.

Canasta Club Meets
Mount Pocono — Miss Mabel Storm entertained her Canasta Club at her home on Kinney Ave. on Thursday night with cards and refreshments. Her guests were Mrs. A. J. Vlassak, Mrs. Matthew Curran, Mrs. Andrew McGinley, Mrs. A. Salerni, Mrs. Charles Whitlow, Mrs. J. H. Stegner and Mrs. John Sutton.

Bill's Zucchini
2 or 3 zucchini squash
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 can (1 lb. 12 oz.) tomatoes
1/4 teaspoon basil
1/4 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon salt
dash pepper
Parmesan cheese

Wash squash, but do not pare. Cut into 1/2 inch slices and saute in the butter. Add onion, garlic powder, tomatoes, basil, oregano, salt and pepper. Simmer 20 to 25 minutes until zucchini is tender and sauce is cooked down. Pour into vegetable dish and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Makes 4-6 servings.

When Bill told me this morning that his eyes have been bothering him, I couldn't resist telling him I wasn't surprised because he's forced me to murder Vitamin A too many times!

Sometimes I think that we get so used to cooking frozen or canned vegetables we forget the wonderful flavor of fresh vegetables. They are inexpensive now, and abundant, so take advantage of them. Corn on the cob is here for another season, and there's lots of ways to fix leftover corn. Try this recipe:

Squash Corn
1/2 pound bacon
1/2 cup sliced onion
5 cups corn, cut from cob
1 egg
1/2 teaspoon salt
parsley for garnish

Cut all but 3 strips of the bacon into small pieces and fry until brown. Drain fat. Fry onions in bacon fat until brown. Place corn, beaten egg, salt and onion in greased 1 1/2 quart baking dish. Add bacon, 2 tablespoons butter and mix thoroughly. Place remaining bacon strips across top and bake 45 minutes at 350.

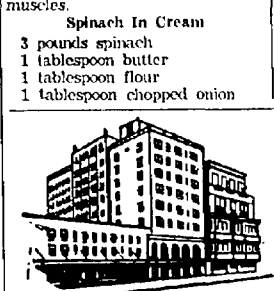

As long as I'm on a Vitamin A kick, I must remind you that one of the best sources is spinach. If Popeye hasn't convinced your children that it will make them a Hercules, disguise it and they won't know they are feeding their muscles.

Spinach In Cream
3 pounds spinach
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon chopped onion

Heat Casserole
16 medium beets
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
one-third cup water
1 small onion, sliced

Slice beets into a buttered baking dish. Season with the sugar, salt, and nutmeg. Dot with butter and all lemon juice, water, and onion. Cover dish and bake for 30 minutes in a 400 oven or until tender. Serves 8.

Vitamins Vs. Well-Done Vegetables Moot Point In Many Household Battles

By Linda Pipher
Daily Record Home Economist
Foods and nutrition students are taught to preserve vitamins in vegetables, they should be cooked in a very small amount of water for a short time. They are not just taught these cardinal principles, they are drilled and drilled until they think of Vitamin A as a human being and are dedicated to its preservation. It's either that or flunk the course; the instructor has only to see a limp, dull green bean to give you that "vitamin murderer" look plus a fat F in her grade book.

So after four years of this it becomes automatic to serve bright colored vegetables, cooked only until they are fork tender. And, of course, I carried on my crusade when I was first married, ignoring Bill's subtle question, "Are those vegetables done?" When his patience was exhausted I firmly explained that Vitamin A was necessary for good skin and healthy eyes. But he didn't want lectures, he wanted cooked vegetables (overdone and mushy in my book).

Finally after threats to go home to Mother to get some good vegetables, I cooked broccoli according to his wishes. It had to be boiled and boiled, and boiled with butter poured over it; not pretty golden melted butter, but browned until it was just before the burning stage. When I put the dish of dead looking broccoli drowned in almost scorched butter on the table, I cringed and guiltily thought how horror stricken Miss Anderson would be if she could see what I was serving. Even Bill's contented smile as he ate wouldn't have thawed her frozen look.

It's been one of our marital conflicts all these years. Even last night when I was cooking zucchini, he looked in the pan and

Music Of Recorder Marks Service

Stroudsburg — The music of an ancient instrument, the recorder, marked the Sunday night service of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church held in the Fifth Street Mission, Gordon Danielson of Stroudsburg was the musician. He was accompanied at the piano by his wife, the former Bernina Hostetter.

Bernina is organist at the South Presbyterian Church in Stroudsburg, N.Y. Her husband is one of the musicians in the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra. They have been visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Hostetter, Rev. Hostetter brought the message on Sunday night.

Canasta Club Meets

Mount Pocono — Miss Mabel Storm entertained her Canasta Club at her home on Kinney Ave. on Thursday night with cards and refreshments. Her guests were Mrs. A. J. Vlassak, Mrs. Matthew Curran, Mrs. Andrew McGinley, Mrs. A. Salerni, Mrs. Charles Whitlow, Mrs. J. H. Stegner and Mrs. John Sutton.

said, "Be sure that squash is done." I glared at him, but cooked it five minutes longer. Such is the way of married life (sigh). But it was good, and I think you would like it, too.

Bill's Zucchini
2 or 3 zucchini squash
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 can (1 lb. 12 oz.) tomatoes
1/2 teaspoon basil
1/4 teaspoon oregano
1/2 teaspoon salt
dash pepper
Parmesan cheese

Wash squash, but do not pare. Cut into 1/2 inch slices and saute in the butter. Add onion, garlic powder, tomatoes, basil, oregano, salt and pepper. Simmer 20 to 25 minutes until zucchini is tender and sauce is cooked down. Pour into vegetable dish and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Makes 4-6 servings.

When Bill told me this morning that his eyes have been bothering him, I couldn't resist telling him I wasn't surprised because he's forced me to murder Vitamin A too many times!

Sometimes I think that we got so used to cooking frozen or canned vegetables we forget the wonderful flavor of fresh vegetables. They are inexpensive now, and abundant, so take advantage of them. Corn on the cob is here for another season, and there's lots of ways to fix leftover ears. Try this recipe:

Squaw Corn
1/2 pound bacon
1/2 cup sliced onion
5 cups corn, cut from cob
1 egg
1/2 teaspoon salt
parsley for garnish

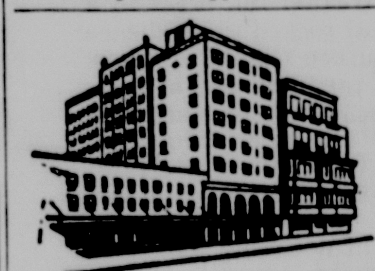

Cut all but 3 strips of the bacon into small pieces and fry until brown. Drain fat. Fry onions in bacon fat until brown. Place corn, beaten egg, salt and onion in greased 1 1/2 quart baking dish. Add bacon, 2 tablespoons bacon fat and mix thoroughly. Place remaining bacon strips across top and bake 45 minutes at 350.

As long as I'm on a Vitamin A kick, I must remind you that one of the best sources is spinach. If Popeye hasn't convinced your children that it will make them a Hercules, disguise it and they won't know they are feeding their muscles.

Spinach In Cream
3 pounds spinach
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon chopped onion

1/4 cup heavy cream
1/2 teaspoon salt
dash pepper
Wash spinach and cook in salted boiling water for just 3 minutes. Drain. In skillet or heavy saucepan, melt butter, add flour and blend. Add spinach, onion, cream, salt and pepper. Heat through and serve at once. This is just as good with sour cream instead of heavy cream. Serves 8.

Beet Casserole
16 medium beets
2 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
one-third cup water
1 small onion, sliced
Slice beets into a buttered baking dish. Season with the sugar, salt, and nutmeg. Dot with butter and all lemon juice, water, and onion. Cover dish and bake for 30 minutes in a 400 oven or until tender. Serves 8.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

I never could agree with mothers who wish their children were little again. Let's face it — most of us with grown children are lucky that despite our sins of omission and commission they have turned out as well as they have.

I'd hate to tempt fate by going through it all again. I might not make the same mistakes but I'd make dandy new ones and this time the kids might not be so resilient. And besides, I've always enjoyed each stage just as it was. I'll qualify that: except the stage from 13 to 15 when I think all boys ought to be turned over to uncles and all girls to aunts the way the Navahos do. Uncles and aunts have the family honor at heart without the emotional fireworks of too close identification.

Certainly we'd hate to give up the present stage of being friends and equals, two of us agreed yesterday contentedly listening to our married daughters chattering away about recipes and home decor with their friends. Being responsible for their own households has made them much more tolerant of our shortcomings, and not feeling responsible any longer for their manners and morals has made us much more relaxed.

Which is not to say that I don't wish I had a tape recording from all the phases gone by. And one I'll bet Cynthia and John Watts will wish they had caught was reported by Nancy. She and her husband had stopped to see the Watts while they were in Palm Beach on vacation. Young Sandy who is a very bright little boy was very interested in the whole project, and listened very carefully while they told about their trip to Miami. Then he turned to his mother and said, "If they went to My Aml, where is Y o u r Aml?"

One person who seems to have really solved the problem of having her cake and eating it too is Ann Hawkes Hutton. Her daughter, Katie, graduated from college and got engaged this Summer which pretty exclusively ends one phase. But Mrs. Hutton, in the process of writing her play about Washington which will have its world premiere at the Cherry Lane Playhouse on Aug. 19 has used not only Katie's name but has also drawn on her experiences in raising a daughter to create the character of the female lead in the play.

Since Mrs. Hutton's husband contends that he's had to compete with Washington during her 25 years of research into the life and times of the General, the play should be an exciting experience not only for the Huttons but for all of us.

Raymondskill Valley — The Monroe-Pike Pomona Grange voted to send a telegram to Gov. Scranton asking him to sign the bill repealing P. L. 561, a mandatory school re-organization law, at their meeting Saturday with Raymondskill Valley Grange as hosts.

The action followed the reading of a letter from the State Master, John Scott, requesting immediate action on an appeal to the governor on behalf of repeal of the law which he felt would do away with local school directors.

It's not a good idea to add curry powder to eggs that are to be scrambled because the combination usually turns out to have an unappetizing color. If you must have curry flavor with your eggs, add a little of the powder to the filling for stuffed eggs.

The top pastry of your pie not brown enough? Brushing the top round with milk before baking usually does the trick.

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

"Gee whiz, Mom . . . look at this!" Our store was thronged Monday, and the enthusiastic shout came from a brown-haired, much tanned lad in camping attire who was bent intently over a display of whistles from Yugoslavia in our International Gift Center. "They're only 29c," he explained as he finally wheeled his mother away from our Italian glassware. "See, they're whittled out of wood and painted. Look, Mom—there's a bird . . . and a viola . . . and a hammer. Hey, looka this!—a revolver."

His mother glanced briefly at the brightly painted articles, and turned away to find something of interest to herself. He was desperate. "MOM . . . I said a revolver. C'mon now, Mom. Twenty-nine cents is dirt cheap for anything all the way from Yugoslavia."

"Mom" ignored him. Actually he couldn't have cared less, for he was already intrigued by the table before which she was standing. It was laden with elephants, burros, lidded boxes and sculptured bookends of various size—real works of art, all of them, priced from 79c to 12.50 or so. "Golly!" he exclaimed, grabbing up a grayish-white elephant. "This is really something, isn't it Mom? What is this stuff anyway?"

His mother explained she thought it was onyx from Mexico, hand carved. "We'd oughta buy an elephant," he told her. "An elephant is good luck if its trunk is in the air. Here's the elephant I'd like to have . . . and it's only 10.00. That isn't much for an onyx elephant from Mexico, is it, Mom?"

His mother looked at me with a grin and a head-shake of despair. "He's been like this ever since we came in here. I feel I should apologize. He's usually a rather quiet boy but . . ." She clipped her sentence abruptly as she looked past me to where her son was standing, holding a piece of African sculpture in the air and shouting. "Hey, Mom . . . come here and see this stuff." As she headed toward him, she smiled at me again. "We just don't get in a store like this very often."

I had to laugh as I watched her wrest the statuette from her son's hands. It was a very unusual, rather grotesque carving of either a goddess or human being, obviously of feminine sex with huge head, tiny busts, and feet almost too tiny to hold so much weight. "But MOM," I heard him protest, "it's only 4.98 . . . and that isn't much for something from AFRICA, is it?"

About fifteen minutes later, I passed mother and son once again. He was busily licking away at some chocolate ice cream purchased, no doubt, at our Wyckoff Fountain. The woman remembered me and spoke. "At last I found a way to keep him quiet," she said, nodding toward the cone.

She was carrying a rather large package, and I am still wondering what it contained. An elephant from Mexico??? A wood carving from Kenya??? Whatever it was, both of them seemed happy, and I'm sure they'll always remember their shopping trip to Wyckoff's. Someday they'll be back . . . that's a certainty.

You too would enjoy a visit to Wyckoff's. Why not make one today?

Vitamins Vs. Well-Done Vegetables

Moot Point In Many Household Battles

By Linda Pipher
Daily Record Home Economist

Foods and nutrition students are taught to preserve vitamins in vegetables, they should be cooked in a very small amount of water for a short time. They are not just taught these cardinal principles, they are drilled and drilled until they think of Vitamin A as a human being and are dedicated to its preservation. It's either that or flunk the course, the instructor has only to see a limp, dull green bean to give you that "vitamin murderer look" plus a fat F in her grade book.

So after four years of this it becomes automatic to serve bright colored vegetables, cooked only until they are fork tender. And, of course, I carried on my crusade when I was first married, ignoring Bill's subtle question, "Are those vegetables done?" When his patience was exhausted I firmly explained that Vitamin A was necessary for good skin and healthy eyes. But he didn't want lectures, he wanted cooked vegetables (overdone and mushy in my book).

Finally after threats to go home to Mother to get some good vegetables, I cooked broccoli according to his wishes. It had to be boiled and boiled, and boiled with butter poured over it; not pretty golden melted butter, but browned until it was just before the burning stage. When I put the dish of dead looking broccoli downed in almost scorched butter on the table, I cringed and guiltily thought how horror stricken Miss Anderson would be if she could see what I was serving. Even Bill's contented smile as he ate wouldn't have thawed her frozen look.

It's been one of our marital conflicts all these years. Even last night when I was cooking zucchini, he looked in the pan and

Music Of Recorder Marks Service

Stroudsburg — The music of an ancient instrument, the recorder, marked the Sunday night service of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church held in the Fifth Street Mission, Gordon Dunneison of Stroudsburg was the musician. He was accompanied at the piano by his wife, the former Bernina Hostetter.

Bernina is organist at the South Presbyterian Church in Stroudsburg, N.Y. Her husband is one of the musicians in the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra. They have been visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Hostetter. Rev. Hostetter brought the message on Sunday night.

Canasta Club Meets

Mount Pocono — Miss Mabel Storm entertained her Canasta Club at her home on Kinney Ave. on Thursday night with cards and refreshments. Her guests were Mrs. A. J. Vlassak, Mrs. Matthew Curran, Mrs. Andrew McGinley, Mrs. A. Salerni, Mrs. Charles Whitlow, Mrs. J. H. Stegner and Mrs. John Sutton.

said, "Be sure that squash is done." I glared at him, but cooked it five minutes longer. Such is the way of married life (sigh). But it was good, and I think you would like it, too.

Bill's Zucchini
2 or 3 zucchini squash
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 can (1 lb. 12 oz.) tomatoes
1/4 teaspoon basil
1/4 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon salt
dash pepper
Parmesan cheese

Wash squash, but do not pare. Cut into 1/2 inch slices and saute in the butter. Add onion, garlic powder, tomatoes, basil, oregano, salt and pepper. Simmer 20 to 25 minutes until zucchini is tender and sauce is cooked down. Pour into vegetable dish and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Makes 4-6 servings.

When Bill told me this morning that his eyes have been bothering him, I couldn't resist telling him I wasn't surprised because he's forced me to murder Vitamin A too many times!

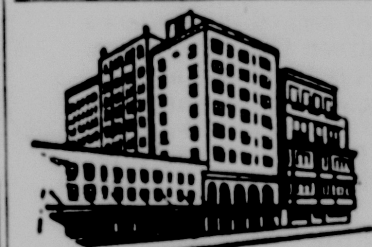

Sometimes I think that we go so used to cooking frozen or canned vegetables we forget the wonderful flavor of fresh vegetables. They are inexpensive now, and abundant, so take advantage of them. Corn on the cob is here for another season, and there's lots of ways to fix leftover ears. Try this recipe:

Squaw Corn
1/2 pound bacon
1/2 cup sliced onion
5 cups corn, cut from cob
1 egg
1/2 teaspoon salt
parsley for garnish
Cut all but 3 strips of the bacon into small pieces and fry until brown. Drain fat. Fry onions in bacon fat until brown. Place corn, beaten egg, salt and onion in greased 1 1/2 quart baking dish. Add bacon, 2 tablespoons butter and mix thoroughly. Place remaining bacon strips across top and bake 45 minutes at 350.

As long as I'm on a Vitamin A kick, I must remind you that one of the best sources is spinach. If Popeye hasn't convinced your children that it will make them a Hercules, disguise it and they won't know they are feeding their muscles.

Spinach In Cream
3 pounds spinach
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 tablespoon chopped onion

Fashion Critics Award Stirs Up A Storm

By Bobby Westbrook Daily Record Fashion Editor

New York — If the Pulitzer Prize committee thinks it has trouble in literary controversy kicked off by its decisions, pity the jury of fashion editors who chose Rudi Gernreich of California to receive the annual City American Fashion Critics award, Winnie, this September. It's still simmering.

Fashion editors attending the American Designer Series in New York could see why. At the City breakfast they saw one of the most controversial of his costumes: zig-zag herringbone tweed with a notched lapel on one side, a rolled collar on the other. However, there was more shock value in a floor-length tweed Football Coat worn over a short tweed suit meant to do away with the laprobe at a football game.

There was also his Horse Coat, made of real horse, not pony, and a Kabuki Dress, an over-the-knee short knitted wrap-around with low seamed kimono sleeves and a wide obi band of wildly contrasting color high on the bust.

A more complete show of Gernreich's collection was shown earlier, including some innovations which make a lot of sense. Lots of designers present reversible coats, but he also had reversible suits. In a black cowboy suit, complete with hat and boots, he featured a sleeveless jacket over a vest with sleeves to make four different ways to wear it.

The way the model he brought from California wore it was with a stick-em-up slouch, and a dead-white deadpan, bruised-eye makeup, that was greeted by a wave of laughter every time she appeared. Considering that City is sponsoring the fresh-air Careless theme in makeup for Fall, the Gernreich endorsed plaster mask must be sort of controversial, too.

Not the kabuki but the judo suit comes into its own in the John Weitz collection. A sportsman himself he does the new season's Sportive Look with a flare both for fun and for real. The judo suit was in white moire for at-home wear as was one of the world's most expensive track suits of white nail head satin with stretch silk satin pants. Other at home clothes feature the Byronic look of the dandy of the Regency period in a smoking suit with braided smoking jacket, jabot and all. There is also ruffled duelling shirts and a crocodile coat of leather.

Much of his collection is designed for active sport use, such as the sloped pants of saddle leather for hunting, and his fisherman's coat of the same leather lined with a red horseblanket. He also uses lots of big what he calls "chunky" sweaters hand-crocheted or knitted.

Dior Does It Too

That's something you could do at home. You might also try a trick of Christian Dior-New York designer Gaston Berthelot, who turns big wide hems up on the outside of suit skirts to form a cuffed hemline.

With much of the classic about it, his Vivant Line sometimes gets pretty far out occasionally as in his Pen Below number; thick fabric wrapped into bloused pants like pantaloons and then buried in boots. Or if it's your neck that gets cold, he has huge puffs of mink, mohair or self fabric which leave only the eyes exposed. For many of his evening costumes, he covers the eyes with a lace veil mask. For more serious fashion news watch for his "waterfall" necklines, above v-necklines, front or back; his big, soft sleeves; and hemline about a half inch longer.

Oleg Cassini in his Young America Series regains much of his enthusiasm, as well he might with business running 48% ahead of last year for the series which wholesales at from $23 to $39 (double that and you've still got an inexpensive Cassini.) There is a series he calls his "sexy school teacher" in sheer wools with white collars and cuffs; or his "little boy" look that doesn't hide the fact that there's a little girl, 6 to 14 size, underneath. His jackets are often as trimly tailored as a riding habit, complete to the velvet collars.

It was tally-ho by bus to the home of Mollie Parnis at 812 Park Ave. for a refreshing change to a house instead of a hotel. There was an inner courtyard, with vines, a fountain, and statuary. The maid hung the coats in the hall closet rather than a check room. However, it was hardly a typical home despite the family portraits scattered around mixed in with paintings by Matisse and his ilk. Not many homes could boast a Bleifeld sculpture (he was the Biblical sculptor who got such a big spread in Life a few weeks ago) on the library table.

Mollie herself is in Russia at the moment. Ben Grauer commented her show with the help and advice of his very attractive wife. It was strange to hear the familiar voice of Blue Cross describing the Mollie Parnis' silhouette: balanced three to one, one part high cropped bodice to three parts gently flaring skirt. Like any typical husband, however, he couldn't help letting a touch of awe creep into his voice as he mentioned prices.

The price of Press Week coverage would go up sharply if it were not for all the free meals provided for the visiting press. Capilan, a new nylon which has been used for everything from carpeting to tires and seat and conveyor belts, here appeared in a gossamer fabric for lingerie and at home costumes, in the show they presented following the dinner they hosted on the roof of the St. Regis. That near the stars, they had an astrologist for entertainment.

A luncheon was given by three stars of the personal possession field: Levine Shoes, Koret handbags and luggage, and jewelry by Erwin Pearl, all selected to highlight the mood of the coming season. To undergird the garments of many seasons is Pellon which treated the press to breakfast, and to explain the multitude of ways in which it shapes high fashions.

Pregnant Trend

Fashions, fashions and more fashions; Seasi (Isaac spelled backward) showed an Audrey Beardsley-inspired silhouette with a long loose tunic and upstanding rim center collar; Ben Zucherman a melon-back coat with organ-pipe seaming; Sami reversed the trend with a full white overskirt over a slim black sheath with a down in front, up in back waistline. Estevez wedding gown had a hula-hoop hemline, up in front and down in back.

To counteract that glazed look, Ship 'n Shore treated the press to a Broadway show, "Never Too Late." The laughter that rocked the audience was good for cobweb-clearing, too. In the play Maureen O'Sullivan plays the role of a middle-aged, still-pretty woman, and a pregnant one at that. She takes it all starry-eyed but it takes three hilarious acts before her husband, played by Paul Ford and bellowing as satisfactorily as he did as Sgt. Bilko's commanding officer, gets used to the idea. Orson Bean and Fran Sharon, both familiar to television fans, play the role of their son-in-law and daughter.

Now one play about middle-aged pregnancy might not seem too significant, but add the fact that the press has also seen the preview of the movie, "The Thrill of It All," dealing with the same theme, plus the fact that for the first time there was a fashion showing devoted entirely to maternity clothes worn by pregnant models, and you've got the makings of what could, if such coincidences occurred in the fashion field, be called A Trend. At any rate, "Never Too Late" made a hilarious lead in for the Ship 'n Shore showing of fashion blouses at luncheon the next day.

Adele Simpson in her showing skipped maternity fashions but touched on almost every other phase of life, not only geographically but politically. In a group of walking dresses with stoles drawn through epaulets, she featured a Kennedy Clan plaid mohair stole over a sapphire blue wool dress, a Goldwater Stripe in a stole muffling a topaz twill trench-coat dress; and a Rockefeller Check stole over a slim black wool.

Men Won't Escape

With the fashion press ready to flee for home and the tensions arising from ten days of exclusively soprano voices, growing more high pitched as exhaustion mounted, their thoughts turned longingly to the deep base notes of masculine voices. Don't think the men are going to escape unscathed from the changes in women's fashions, though.

The women's clothes borrow heavily from the men for the Sportive Look, so the men art turning to bigger, sportier patterns in suitings, and suit jackets cut like English hacking jackets with double vents at the back.

With women putting on floor-length dresses for evening, there are going to be a lot more "black tie" evenings for the men for which they will wear a more casual dinner with shawl-collared jacket and soft shirts. For country or at-home entertaining, the host will wear black tie with plaid, velvet or loden cloth jackets cut exactly like a tuxedo. Seeing how well their wives look in the velvet smoking jackets of 50 years ago, they will have one for themselves, teaming them up with clan plaid slacks.

Well, that's what the fashion forecast said. It might take a couple of seasons for the ideas of high fashions, in either men or women's wear to catch on in (name your city) but don't say we didn't warn you.

KABUKI DRESS, (above), designed by Rudi Gernreich of California, winner of the 1963 National Fashion Award which has kicked up quite a controversy. The Kabuki dress is of orange and red herringbone wool knit with a black and white inserted obi sash banded in olive green. The white tights and black and white herringbone knit slippers are by Capezio.

"High Noon," (left), is another Gernreich creation, a four-piece oxford flannel suit (sleeveless jacket, sleeved vest) which can be worn as a sleeveless suit over a black and white "barber" striped cotton shirt. It is fastened with silver coin buttons. The Oxford felt cowboy hat is by Leon Bennett, and the dead-white make-up worn by his own model is endorsed by Grenreich.

WATERFALL COLLAR in Christian Dior - New York's "Petit Diner" is a prophetic note toward softer lines and lower necklines, and the trend from the "little nothing" dress to the "something special." Slip and Sleeveless it is of black crepe and has a touch of white roses at the waist.

"SEXY SCHOOLTEACHER" is what Oleg Cassini termed his demure series in his "Young America" collection for Fall, 1963. Of black velvet with long tight sleeves, its portrait neckline is circled with white silk above a large black satin bow and the skirt curves out from a velvet belted waistline.

THREE TO ONE is a proportion Mollie Parnis likes for Fall, one part an Empire bodice of emerald green velvet, beaded and jewel-fringed; to two parts narrow silk and antron skirt eased with tiny gathers at the waist and a deep slash at the side.

MOOR-WALKING SUIT meant for walking on the moor is this Harris tweed hacking suit with suede elbow patches and collar from the John Weitz Boutique who does the season's new "sportive" look with a flair.

Pocono Mountains Jaycees One Of Top Groups In U.S.

STROUDSBURG — The Pocono Mountains Junior Chamber of Commerce received a "blue chip" award as one of the outstanding chapters in the nation during 1962-63 at a meeting of the state board of directors in Hazleton Saturday.

Ray Roberts, immediate past president, accepted the award which was presented by Richard Merck, state president. The local chapter recently received a Keystone Chapter award as one of the best units in the state.

In addition to Roberts, Atty. Edwin Krawitz of Stroudsburg, state associate legal counselor, attended the session and served on the research and development committee during workshop sessions.

Work Starts On Roseto Knights Home

ROSETO — Groundbreaking ceremonies for the Father De-Nisco Council Knights of Columbus new home were held Sunday on the 14½ acres of land along the West Bangor to Roseto road. The ceremonies were sponsored by the Home Assn. of the council.

Anthony Trigliani, first president of the assn. and present grand knight of the council, was the master of ceremonies. The Rev. Gennaro J. Leone, C. M., chaplain of the council, blessed the ground.

Principal participants in the ceremonies were James Murphy, of Stroudsburg, Trigliani, Anthony Cappazolla, president, and William Doall, the Bangor contractor who donated the land. Also, Attorney Philip S. Ruggerio, Joseph C. Harrison, grand knight of Father Butler's council of Stroudsburg, and Michael Goffredo of the Pope Pius X Assembly of Easton, past grand knight of the council.

Father Leone, James Murphy, and Cappazolla presented short dedicatory remarks.

Anthony L. Pagano, contractor, and a member of the council, has been awarded the contract for the construction.

The new building will be an L-shaped, with the main entrance facing east. The structure will have a 36 by 72 ft. council chamber. The remaining area will be used for a conference room, offices and lavatory facilities.

Preliminary construction has already begun.

Roberts attended sessions on the constitutional revision program of the Jaycees.

Led To Bills
Commenting on the subject, the local official said:

"It was gratifying to the Jaycees to see that three years of work on this project has resulted in the current House and Senate bills calling for the decision for a revision of Pennsylvania's antique constitution to be brought to the voters."

He charged that some legislators are letting "self-vested interests" stand in the way of passage of the bill and added:

"Recently, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts floated identical bond issues or loans. Pennsylvania will pay $50,000 more interest on the $2,000,000 loan because of its limited borrowing capacity set by its constitution. This 'authority financing' is costing us $100,000,000 a year — the difference between a two per cent and five per cent sales tax."

Quiz Shows To Return

NEW YORK (AP) — The big-money quiz show, which scandalized television four years ago, is coming back — "absolutely unriggable," said the producer of the new show.

ABC-TV took the wraps off the show yesterday, "100 Grand," scheduled for a Sept. 15 debut in the 10 p.m. Sunday time slot.

It's arranged so the competitors (each under double guard until broadcast time) will make up the questions for each other.

And before a winner can pick up the $100,000 jackpot, an electronic computer, five chambers of commerce, an encyclopedia publisher and untold number of viewers will get into the act.

Study Planned On Air Filth

HARRISBURG (AP)—The State Air Pollution Commission announced plans Tuesday to make a two-year study of air pollution in the Wyoming and Lackawanna River Valley areas of Luzerne and Lackawanna Counties.

The study will include the cities of Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, according to a State Health Department report.

The study will be divided into two phases. The first will concentrate on the Wyoming Valley area while the second will be centered in the Lackawanna River Valley.

It is expected, the department said, that the study will be concluded by the summer of 1965.

The department added that, depending upon the results of the survey, air pollution regulations for the areas may be formulated by the commission.

House Debates Quality Of Films

HARRISBURG (AP) — The House debated yesterday whether taxes or the quality of films was hurting attendance at motion picture theaters in Pennsylvania.

But it did turn down, a proposal that the theaters be exempt from admission taxes.

House rules permit a defeated bill to be reconsidered once, but there was no immediate indication whether the legislation's backers would try again.

The vote on the liquor measure was 109-78. On July 10, it was turned down 101-95.

EVERY BOY CAN HAVE A BIG DREAM FOR THE FUTURE . . .

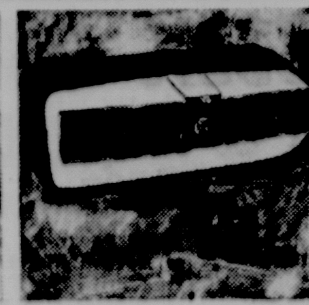

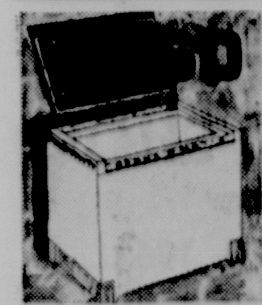

DOCTOR, LAWYER, JET PILOT OR ASTRONAUT, every youngster sets a goal in life. But State Senator Fred Rooney knows that these dreams of our young people cannot become real without our help. As chairman of the Joint Government Commission's committee on education, Senator Rooney is concerned over the limitations past neglect has placed on the educational opportunities this state offers to its boys and girls. As a result, he has fought to upgrade the state's educational system at all levels. To meet the demands of this age of specialized skills, he is now fighting in the legislature for his bill to establish technical schools throughout Pennsylvania.

For Senator Rooney is convinced that if Pennsylvania is to move ahead, if it is to compete with the other industrial states of the nation, it must become first in education. More important, only in this way can Pennsylvania utilize its greatest resource, the talents of our young people. Only in this way can the dreams of our youngsters be made real. It is to the parents of youngsters in Northampton, Carbon, Monroe and Pike Counties that Senator Rooney now appeals to send him to congress to press for federal aid to Pennsylvania's educational system, and to further legislation to give opportunity to all the young people of this nation.

Liston Declares: 'Right Price' To Fight Clay

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Sonny Liston indicated Tuesday that he might not fight Cassius Clay in September as proposed, but left all plans dependent upon one basic premise—"if the price is right."

The 30-year-old champ was in good humor as he met newsmen at his hotel headquarters to discuss his future and his first round knockout of Floyd Patterson in 2 minutes and 10 seconds Monday night.

At the same time, Patterson was flying back to New York, determined to keep on fighting.

George Parnassus, Los Angeles promoter, offered a guarantee of $2,500,000 to the Liston-promotional group for a Liston-Clay bout in the Los Angeles Coliseum in February.

Own Promoter

Jack Nilon, Sonny's advisor, said the bout would be held in a state where Liston could be his own promoter. He said Liston is president of Intercontinental Promotions, Inc., of which Nilon's brothers, Jim and Bob, are officers, as well as Liston's lawyer, Sal Avena. Nilon said he holds no stock.

Nilon said negotiations would continue with Clay and he hopes to announce a definite site and date within a week or 10 days. It has been reported that Sept. 30 in Philadelphia Stadium is the target. Clay has been offered 20 per cent.

However, Liston did not appear too anxious to fight again in two months.

"I would say September is pretty fast," Liston replied to a question about his plans. "But if the price is right I'll fight today."

For 'Right Price'

When Teddy Brenner, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, asked Liston if he would appear on home television for the Garden, Liston said "If the price is right I'd fight anywhere, TV or no TV, even if nobody sees me but the promoter."

He was asked about Clay's credentials as a legitimate challenger.

"I would say Clay has a lot to learn," Liston said. "I hope nobody teaches him before I get to him. You say he has speed."

Probe Boxing Cartels

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — Abe J. Greene, commissioner of the World Boxing Association, asked Tuesday for a congressional investigation of the "promotional cartels" which control the heavy-weight championship.

In telegrams to Sen. Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn., and Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., Greene said that without "strong federal control and legislation . . . a major scandal, possibly overshadowing any of the past, is inevitable."

He said such legislation is needed "to curb the promotional cartels which are taking everything out of boxing without making one single contribution to its advancement or its welfare."

He said a bill by Kefauver to create a federal boxing commission and federal advisory board "has been lying fallow for a long time and should be reawakened."

As for specific "promotional cartels," Greene said there is "only one—whichever controls the heavy-weight champion control the cartel. Now it's the Nilon brothers, who manage Sonny Liston. They're going to run the next fight with Cassius Clay—no other promoter can bid and they control the television."

"There was no place in sports for the second bout," Greene said. "Sports writers, knowledgeable boxing men all, assailed it. But the promoter's cartel had Liston so thoroughly tied up with a shakedown contract that a place had to be found for it."

Crowther, born at Bridgeport, Conn., was a back for Brown University during his playing days.

Eagles Bow, 7-6; Crowe's Triumphs

STROUBSBURG — Front-running Eagles lost valuable ground yesterday by suffering a 7-6 defeat at the hands of IBW in a Monroe County Babe Ruth League battle. Crowe Insurance topped Line Material in the other contest, 17-15.

The defeat by the Eagles, their third of the season against nine triumphs, gave them a slim game-and-a-half edge over second-place VFW which was idle yesterday. The VFW has a 7-4 record.

IBW led Eagles all the way after the first inning when the losers had scored the first run of the game to hold a momentary 1-0 lead. But IBW bounced back with three tallies in the

Yanks Blank Angels For Fifth Straight

NEW YORK (AP) — John Blanchard, continuing to prove a valuable substitute for the ailing Roger Maris in right field, smashed two more home runs in the New York Yankees' 7-0 victory over the Los Angeles Angels Tuesday night.

Stan Williams and Steve Hamilton combined to shut out the Angels as the league leaders extended their latest winning streak to five in a row.

Williams, who hasn't pitched a complete game since opening day, lasted until the eighth inning when the Angels filled the bases on two singles and a walk with nobody out. Hamilton came out of the bullpen to strike out Leon Wagner, Lee Thomas and Billy Moran leaving the runners stranded.

The victory went to Williams, his fourth against three defeats. Paul Foytack, first of four Los Angeles hurlers, was the loser. A six-run Yankee outburst in the fifth finished him.

Shawnee Greets Wilkinson

SHAWNEE — Physical fitness was the theme at Shawnee Inn during the weekend when Bud Wilkinson, head football coach at Oklahoma University, and Dick Snyder, counsellor of President Kennedy's fitness program, invaded the premises for a four-day golfing vacation.

Snyder was on a leave-of-absence as managing editor of the Topeka (Kans.) Capitol. Both he and Wilkinson, who left early yesterday morning, attended Fred Waring's music workshop at Delaware Water Gap during their visit.

Wilkinson noted that Waring's "Philosophy of being creative in music is similar to the image we're trying to create in the physical fitness program."

Wilkinson also is currently serving as director of the President's fitness program.

Both men apparently felt right at home with Waring who, at 63, still does daily push-ups and other exercises. Wilkinson shot a par 36 on Shawnee's new White Nine while accompanied by Waring, Snyder and Fred Scrutched.

At Daily, a Country Club member, also slammed a hole-in-one during their visit on the 220-yard par 3 Blue Nine using a No. 3 wood.

Title Tests Throwing Arm

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Y. A. Tittle gave his throwing arm a test Tuesday and passed it with flying colors.

The 36-year-old quarterback of the New York Giants underwent an operation last May for the removal of a sac which caused swelling of his right elbow.

Peeney-Cullen Win Shawnee Tourney

SHAWNEE — Miss Betsy Peeney and Mrs. William Cullen combined scores to win the top golfing honors at Shawnee Country Club yesterday in an 18-hole blind partner tournament, scoring a net 70.

Tournament players started the day's event in regular fashion scoring with a partner that was assigned to them by professional Jack White. Only upon completion of 18 holes did individual members know who had been their partner. Full handicaps were used for the tournament.

Mrs. Peeney and Mrs. Cullen also took low gross honors in their respective classes. Miss Peeney shot an 84 and Mrs. Cullen carried a 103 for top honors. Because of a club ruling allowing only one prize per player, Mrs. Herbert C. Behrens received the prize for low gross class A with a 92 and Mrs. Clement Cleveland III took top honors in Class B with 105. The low gross Class C prize went to Mrs. Gabriel Cuccolo who carded a 110 for the day.

Putting Prizes

Putting prizes went to Mrs. Harry Sykes and Miss Betsy Peeney who took only 31 putts during the tournament. Mrs. Joseph Schlegel took top honors for the associate putters in an even-odd tournament carding a 16.

Mrs. Edward Williams, association president reminded members that the junior golf clinic would be held tomorrow. The Fred Waring Junior Golf Tournament is scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 7.

Hungarian's Hopes: Top Jockey In U.S.

OCEANPORT, N.J. (AP)—Paul Kallai is a muscular package of steel—all 5 feet and 110 pounds of him. A champion boxer and jockey in his native Hungary, he leaves no doubt about his determination to become a top rider in the United States. Bigger yet, he desires to become a citizen.

His fellow jockeys at Monmouth Park are certain he'll make it big in America, his goal since 1956 when he fled from behind the Iron Curtain. Kallai began riding in the U.S. at the 1962 Pimlico fall meeting, after entering this country from Canada on a 6-month permit which now has been extended by the immigration service.

"My big hope is to become a citizen."

The 29-year-old native of Budapest, where he was born Oct. 2, 1933, talked softly as he glanced around the jockey's room. His English was broken, but good considering he couldn't speak a word of it when he landed in Canada in 1960.

Kallai, one of the most popular riders at Monmouth Park, has brown hair, and perfect gleaming teeth dominate his sharp, sun-tanned features. He has an iron handshake that can crack knuckles.

"Nobody can know how it feels to be here — unless he's been through it," he said quietly. "My wife, Elizabeth, lives near the track. We have a girl, she is five. Her name? It's Elizabeth, too. We expect another baby—the end of this month, or early in August."

So Many Medals, She Can't Recall

ATLANTA (AP)—You'd think a 12-year-old girl could remember how many swimming awards she has won. But Pat Lynn Shanahan had to count hers. She has 138 medals and trophies.

The pert, little blonde with hazel eyes and a sunburned nose brought home a handful of additional medals from the Golden Isles Invitational Swimming and Diving Championships at Brunswick, Ga., last weekend. She set four records.

"I like the thrill of competition, but I think I'll just keep swimming until it isn't fun any more. And then I'll quit," she said. "She practices an hour and a half a day during swimming season."

Pat began swimming when she was 9 at Philadelphia, and her first team was the Colonial Village team. She since has been a member of the Suburban team, also at Philadelphia, and the Northern Virginia Aquatic Club and the Lake Barcroft team, both of Falls Church, Va. She now swims for the Atlanta Independent Swimming Association.

Many Thrills

The pretty little girl with braces on her teeth can't remember her biggest thrill, possibly because there have been so many.

"Nearly every meet is a thrill," she said in an interview. "And the spirit of competition is always there."

The marks she set in the Golden Isles meet were in the 11-12 age division. She did the 50-yard freestyle in 28 seconds, the 50-yard breaststroke in :33.3, the backstroke in :33.3 and the butterfly in :31.2.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Shanahan.

Pat has two sisters and a brother. Her brother, Bill, was captain of the Dartmouth basketball team last season.

One of her sisters, Sandy, swam in competition until last year. Sandy, 17, now is a student at the University of Georgia.

When Pat counted her trophies, she smiled and said, "I've still got quite a way to go to catch up with Sandy. She won 100 before she retired."

Counterman's Thrashes Cramer's

EAST STROUBSBURG — Counterman's used a five-run third inning to score a 6-1 win over Cramer's yesterday in an East Stroudsburg Little League contest.

Dan Darr, who hurried the distance for the winners, smacked three safeties to help his cause while teammate John Hood had two hits in three trips. Darr allowed only three hits.

Liston Declares: 'Right Price' To Fight Clay

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Sonny Liston indicated Tuesday that he might not fight Cassius Clay in September as proposed, but left all plans dependent upon one basic promise: "If the price is right."

The 30-year-old champ was in good humor as he met newsmen at his hotel headquarters to discuss his future and his first round knockout of Floyd Patterson in 2 minutes and 10 seconds Monday night.

At the same time, Patterson was flying back to New York, determined to keep on fighting.

George Parnassus, Los Angeles promoter, offered a guarantee of $2,750,000 to the Liston promotion group for a Liston-Clay bout in the Los Angeles Coliseum in February.

Own Promoter

Jack Nilon, Sonny's adviser, said the bout would be held in a state where Liston could be his own promoter. He said Liston is president of International Promotions, Inc., of which Nilon's brothers, Jim and Bob, are officials, as well as Liston's lawyer, Sal Ayers. Nilon said he holds no stock.

Eagles Bow, 7-6; Crowe's Triumphs

STROUDSBURG — Front-running Eagles lost valuable ground yesterday by suffering a 7-6 defeat at the hands of BWV in a Monroe County Babe Ruth League battle. Crowe Insurance topped Line Material in the other contest, 17-15.

The defeat by the Eagles, their third of the season against nine triumphs, gave them a slim game-and-a-half edge over second-place VFW which was edged yesterday. The VFW has a 7-4 record.

EWV led Eagles all the way after the first inning when the losers had scored the first run of the game to hold a momentary 1-0 lead. But EWV bounced back with three tallies in the second frame and added four more in the fourth to gain the nod.

Line Material outslugged Crowe's by a 13-11 margin but Crowe's erupted for six runs in the fifth and four more in the sixth to take the victory. It was a slugfest and scoring feasted all the way as both teams scored in every round except the fourth.

Even make-up games will be played Friday evening VFW vs. Exchange Club at Giffels Field, and Crowe's vs. Line Material at Jim's.

Kallai produced two scrapbooks filled with newspaper clippings and photographs from Iron Curtain countries.

The cover of one scrapbook was torn away, showing a stiff cardboard backing.

"The secret police in Budapest came to my parents' house after I fled to Germany," he said. "Looking for microfilm, I suppose."

Kallai went to Vienna to ride for three weeks in July of 1936, a few months before the Hungarian revolution. On the night before he was to go back to Budapest, he and Paul Boskai, another top jockey, slipped away from their Hungarian party and went to West Germany.

"When the revolution came, I started back to Budapest to get my wife. But I got lost in a swamp, and the Austrian police sent me back to Vienna. When I got there, there was my wife. She left as soon as the fighting began."

He said his best year as a jockey was 1933, when he made $13,000 in Vienna.

"I haven't beat that yet in this country," he said. "But I will. This is only the middle of the year."

So Many Medals, She Can't Recall

ATLANTA (AP)—You'd think a 12-year-old girl could remember how many swimming awards she has won. But Pat Lynn Shanahan had to count hers. She has 133 medals and trophies.

The pert, little blonde with hazel eyes and a sunburned nose brought home a handful of additional medals from the Golden Isles Invitational Swimming and Diving Championships at Brunswick, Ga., last weekend. She set four records.

"I like the thrill of competition, but I think I'll just keep swimming until it isn't fun any more. And then I'll quit," she said.

She practices an hour and a half a day during swimming season.

Pat began swimming when she was 9 at Philadelphia, and her first team was the Colonial Village team. She since has been a member of the Suburban team, also at Philadelphia, and the Northern Virginia Aquatic Club and the Lake Barcroft team, both of Falls Church, Va. She now swims for the Atlanta Independent Swimming Association.

Many Thrills

The pretty little girl with braces on her teeth can't remember her biggest thrill, possibly because there have been so many.

"Nearly every meet is a thrill," she said in an interview. "And the spirit of competition is always there."

The marks she set in the Golden Isles meet were in the 11-12 age division. She did the 50-yard freestyle in 28 seconds, the 50-yard breaststroke in 33.3, the backstroke in 33.3 and the butterfly in 31.2.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Shanahan. Pat has two sisters and a brother. Her brother, Bill, was captain of the Dartmouth basketball team last season.

One of her sisters, Sandy, swam in competition until last year. Sandy, 17, now is a student at the University of Georgia.

When Pat counted her trophies, she smiled and said, "I've still got quite a way to go to catch up with Sandy. She won 100 before she retired."

Frustrations For Young Pitcher

WINCHESTER, Ky. (AP)—At 13, C. C. Lowe knows the frustrations of pitchers twice his age.

He struck out 19 of the 21 batters who faced him Monday and got the other two on easy putouts.

But Lowe, a member of Winchester's Little League All-Stars, was as generous with walks as he was stingy with hits. He walked nine men, hit three others and was charged with a wild pitch. His catchers allowed several passed balls and committed an error or two.

The final score: Georgetown 5, Winchester 3.

Counterman's Thrashes Cramer's

EAST STROUDSBURG — Counterman's used a five-run third inning to score a 6-1 win over Cramer's yesterday in an East Stroudsburg Little League contest.

Dan Darr, who hurled the distance for the winners, smacked three safeties to help his cause while teammate John Hood had two hits in three trips. Darr allowed only three hits.

Smells Of A Swindle

By William A. Doyle

Q. My sister-in-law owns 113 shares of stock in a Canadian mining company, purchased by her husband in 1952. He bought the stock after receiving a number of long-distance telephone calls from a broker in Toronto. Now, for the first time in all these years, they have heard from the company. My sister received a letter offering to exchange the shares she owns for an equal number of shares of another mining company—if she will pay a "registration fee" of $11.

The recent letter came from a post office box in Panama City. It said to send her check to a post office box in Nassau, Bahamas Island. I told my sister-in-law to forget the whole thing and save $11. What do you say?

A. I'm with you. The whole thing smells of swindle.

But, just to make sure, your sister-in-law would be wise to check with a local broker or bank to find out if either of those stocks has any value.

I'm sure that many readers will be amazed to learn that anyone would even consider sending good money to some faraway post office box, or (worse yet) buying stocks as the result of fast sales pitches via long-distance telephone calls.

But the sad facts keep popping up all the time. All too many people do just that—despite all the warnings sounded here and elsewhere.

And I suspect that (as a result of the recovery in stock prices and the reviving interest in stocks) the hot-shot pitch men and con men are coming out of the woodwork again and looking for more suckers to fleece.

A cardinal rule of investing is to "know your broker." Don't ever throw money down the drain, as the result of fast sales talk.

Q. You wrote about a company which was merged with another company and, as a result, had its name changed. You explained that, in that case, there was no need for the stockholders to receive new stock certificates and said that if the stockholders wanted to send in their old stock certificates for new ones they could.

How about this case? A company in which I own stock changed its name. I don't think there was any merger involved.

I wrote to the company and asked if I should send in my stock certificates and have it exchanged for one with the new company name. The company replied, no, that to save expenses, no new certificates would be issued and that the old certificates would be honored.

This seems shifty to me. Should I insist that I receive a new stock certificate?

A. You can, if you want to. And the company most certainly should issue you new certificates (bearing the company's new name) if you do insist.

If the company absolutely refuses to issue new certificates in place of the old ones, then it would seem that you have reason to be suspicious.

However, it is most unlikely that you have any reason for concern. The same thing applies here as applies in that previous column you refer to.

Very often, when a company changes its name, it does not call in all its old stock certificates and replace them with new certificates. As your company pointed out, that can be an expensive thing. As a stockholder (a part owner) you should be interested in seeing your company save money.
